Blow for town as store set to close in the autumn

GRAEME WHITFIELD
Business Editor

A POPULAR department store in a Northumberland market town is to close.

Beales, on Hexham's Fore Street, is to shut its doors in the autumn, with the owners citing the challenging conditions on the UK high street that have seen dozens of retail chains either closing shops or going bust.

Beales is the main department in Hexham, having taken over the site of the historic Robbs store in 2010 when its owners went into administration. The town's main post office is based inside the shop.

Nurse who stole drugs was caught out by colleagues

KATIE DICKINSON
Reporter

A NURSE who repeatedly stole codeine from her hospital was caught out when colleagues marked a box of the drug with a UV pen, a disciplinary panel heard.

Staff at the University Hospital of North Durham marked a strip of codeine when they suspected Rachael Hird was raiding the drug cupboard on two wards.

The NHS trust reported the missing medication to police, who searched Hird's home and found the UV-marked codeine in her make-up bag.

Now a disciplinary panel has ruled that she should be struck off after finding that she had repeatedly taken codeine from the hospital between July and September 2017.

A report of the Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC) hearing also said Hird had attempted to obtain Dihydrocodeine and Naproxen from a GP surgery in Consett through a prescription which was not hers.

The hearing was told the charges arose whilst Hird was employed as a bank nurse by the County Durham and Darlington NHS Foundation Trust working on Ward 13 and Ward 6 at the University Hospital of North Durham, with a permanent position in the Accident and Emergency department.

The NMC's report said: "It came to the Trust's attention that codeine was going missing from Ward 13 and Ward 6 at the Hospital. Miss Hird was identified as the only member of staff with access to the drugs on all of the four occasions when the medication had gone missing.

"The pharmacy marked a strip of codeine with ultra violet (UV) marker pen and, following a shift worked by Miss Hird, the codeine was found to be missing."

A police officer told the panel that when he searched Hird's home on October 18 2017, he "found a blister pack of codeine phosphate 30mg 28 x containing 13 tablets in Miss Hird's make-up bag".

The officer added it was "later identified as belonging to the hospital as it had the UV marker on". The report said Hird denied the allegation of theft at the first interview with the police on October 18, 2017.

The panel said: "There was subsequently an incident at a GP surgery in Consett where someone telephoned purporting to be another individual requesting a prescription for Dyhydrocodeine and Naproxen.

"It was later established that this was Miss Hird, who was arrested on suspicion of fraud on 17 November 2017. At a police interview on the same day Miss Hird made full admissions to the allegation of theft and fraud."

The report noted that during a disciplinary interview with the Trust on December 14 2017, Hird stated: "I know what I have done is wrong and I am just sorry that I have let the Trust down and my managers."

But the panel ruled that she should be barred from the profession permanently after finding "her actions would be regarded as deplorable and unacceptable by members of the public and fellow members of the nursing profession".

Their judgement said: "The panel considered that Miss Hird was in a position of trust, where as a nurse, she was responsible for providing safe and effective care to patients. It considered that she abused this position of trust by taking large quantities of medication whilst on duty."

> This Newcastle dog walker was well prepared with bags. The council will fine walkers who allow their dogs to mess up paths – but not for failing to carry bags

Dog walkers won't bag a fine for forgetfulness

HERBERT SODEN
Reporter

SEVEN North East councils have confirmed they won't be fining dog walkers who fail to carry "poo bags".

This comes as councils across the country have stepped up the war on dog walkers who don't come prepared in a bid to tackle dog mess.

You no longer need to be caught not picking up dog mess, in several parts of the country almost anyone walking a dog risks a fine if they're caught out with their pet and don't have enough poo bags on them already.

Dog walkers in Lincolnshire can be challenged to prove their intention to pick up dog mess by producing some form of bag with anyone without a bag facing a fixed penalty notice of up to £100 or a fine of up to £1,000 if a case goes to court under rules that came into force in September.

And in Canterbury, you need to carry at least two.

But seven of the region's local authorities have confirmed that this isn't something they're doing.

Northumberland, North Tyneside, Sunderland and Gateshead Council's said that currently dog walkers are not fined for being without poo bags.

Newcastle City Council said it was "impracticable" to search dog-lovers for plastic bags, but said it took a "robust" approach to the issue.

A spokesperson for Newcastle City Council said: "This is an approach we've looked at in the past but it was deemed impracticable and was therefore not pursued.

"We have a robust approach to dog fouling in the city and the responsibility lies with dog owners and walkers and we would remind them they are committing an offence if they do not clean up after their pet.

"The consequences of this can range from a £75 fixed penalty notice charge up to a £1,000 fine."

South Tyneside Council explained that it takes a "proactive approach" to "educate" dog walkers rather than punish them.

A spokesperson for the council explained: "We take a proactive, rather than a punitive, approach to responsible dog ownership. Our wardens regularly talk to dog owners about the importance of clearing up after their pets and we also supply dog waste bags.

"We have also placed signage across the borough in key locations to remind dog owners to clear up after their pets and also to highlight areas where dogs are excluded or need to be kept on a lead.

"We also run high profile campaigns including No Messing, We're Watching You, Love Where You Live and Report It."

Meanwhile Durham County Council said that it would "consider all options" when its current public spaces protection order, which covers canine control, comes up for review next year.

Ian Hoult, neighbourhood protection manager at Durham County Council, said: "We do not currently issue fines to pet owners who are found with insufficient dog waste bags but we will consider all options when we review our Public Space Protection Order in 2020.

"The current order was introduced in 2017, following a public consultation, and extended our powers for dog control.

"As well as issuing fines to those who do not pick up after their dog, the order empowers us to take action in other circumstances, including when owners allow their dogs to stray or fail to put their pet on the lead when asked to do so by a police officer or one of our neighbourhood wardens.

"Dogs are also banned from certain fenced off play parks."

Family pays tribute to dad, 30, who died in crash

> David Farrell

A grieving family has paid tribute to a 'devoted father' who died in a motorcycle crash.

David Michael Farrell was on his off-road bike when he collided with a car on the A68 at Allensford Bank, near Consett, shortly after 3.30pm on Thursday.

The 30-year-old, from nearby Bridgehill, appeared to lose control on a bend and crossed the carriageway, colliding with a Nissan Qashqai.

An air ambulance was called but paramedics were unable to save Mr Farrell, who was pronounced dead at the scene.

A driver and passenger in the Nissan, a couple in their 60s from Scotland, were uninjured, but suffered shock.

Mr Farrell's family said: "David was a devoted father to his young son, a loving fiance and a cherished son, brother and uncle.

"His family and friends are devastated by this tragic and unexpected accident.

"The family would like to extend their heartfelt thanks to the driver of the other vehicle involved and the paramedics who attempted resuscitation."

Anyone with information about the accident or with dashcam footage is asked to call 101, quoting reference number 236.

Housing plans on site of former school approved

THE transformation of a derelict former school in Newcastle into a new housing estate has gathered pace after councillors gave the scheme top marks.

Wharrier Street Primary School, in Walker, was torn down in 2013 after it merged with St Anthony's C of E Primary to form the new Central Walker Church of England Primary.

But after years of the site laying fallow, plans for 36 affordable rent houses were approved on Friday.

Newcastle City Council's planning committee granted planning permission subject to a legal agreement being reached between the council and developer Places for People.

Committee chairman Coun Hazel Stephenson said: "I'm very, very pleased to see the housing, it's really very welcome."

The proposed estate will be made up of two, three and four bedroom properties including some bungalows.

The application states: "The aim of this development is to aid in the regeneration of the neighbourhood, and as well as providing much needed affordable homes, provide a well overlooked extension to the footpath linking Wharrier Street with the proposed new Chalfont Road site, new Central Walker Primary School and Walker Road beyond."

Places for People said: "The proposed development will promote all the benefits of its sustainable location as an extension to the existing community."

Deputy council leader Joyce McCarty, who has responsibility for housing, said: "We want more affordable homes for rent in the city, so I welcome these homes on the site of a former school."

Home saga finally draws to a close

PLANS for a new home in woodland near Morpeth, which have been approved three times in recent years only to be quashed in court, have been turned down.

The current outline application, for a five-bedroom house on land west of Bramblings, in Tranwell Woods, dates back to 2014, although the site history goes back three decades.

After several court cases final approval was granted in July 2016 but again fell foul of a High Court judge in March 2017.

Northumberland County Council decided to challenge this in the Court of Appeal, but this was thrown out in July last year.

And at last week's meeting of the Castle Morpeth Local Area Council, members followed the planners' latest advice to reject the application.

The site is in the green belt and the whole saga is based on the fact the application could only be acceptable if it represented 'limited infilling in a village'.

This was what the council's previous recommendations for approval relied on, but there is no agreement that Tranwell Woods is a village and, more importantly, that this is infilling.

Motorists facing delays while bridge is repaired

HERBERT SODEN
Local Democracy Reporter

MAJOR maintenance works on the Scotswood Bridge are set to start next week and are likely to lead to months of delays for motorists.

Crucial expansion joints on the exit and entry ramps on the Gateshead side of the bridge have worn out and urgently need replacing. The work is expected to start on April 23 and will take up to 12 weeks.

This will be the first time in the bridge's 52-year history that these major comb expansion joints, which allow the bridge to expand and contract with temperature to prevent it from buckling and stretching, have been replaced.

Vehicle access across the bridge will be maintained at all times, though the works will lead to some diversions - either via the Chainbridge Road slip roads below the Blaydon Viaduct or the Derwenthaugh Road/A1114 Riverside Way roundabout near the MetroCentre.

The works will be phased so that only one expansion joint is replaced at a time, ensuring that only one diversion route will operate at any given time.

The first phase will involve the replacement of the comb joint on the northbound carriageway of the South Viaduct to Scotswood Bridge from the A695 Derwenthaugh Road westbound.

Anneliese Hutchinson, Gateshead Council's service director for Development, Transport and Public Protection, says: "Fifty-two years is pretty good going for a bridge that has taken the amount of traffic the Scotswood Bridge has taken over the years, but it's beginning to show its age. We need to replace these joints now to guarantee the future of this important crossing.

"We'll be programming the work to ensure that traffic continues to flow across the bridge, and to minimise disruption, but it's possible that some journeys might take a little longer while the works are carried out.

"We will ensure that the annual Blaydon Race won't be disrupted by the works."

The bridge first opened for traffic in March 1967 as a replacement for the 136-year-old Chain Bridge which was located a little downstream of the current bridge and which is mentioned in the well-known Geordie Ridley song "The Blaydon Races".

Within a few years of opening, the new Scotswood Bridge had to be reduced from dual to single carriageway while strengthening works were carried out. This followed concerns that were raised about potential flaws in its box girder design following the collapse of the Cleddau Bridge in Milford Haven in 1970.

From 1970, the bridge carried the A69 western bypass until the construction of the Blaydon Bridge and the new A1 in 1990.

Fewer women and girls are being exploited

SOPHIE DOUGHTY
Crime Reporter

GROOMING gangs who exploit Newcastle's most vulnerable women and girls for sex, are losing their grip on the city, says Tyneside's top cop.

It has now been more than five years since the reality of sex exploitation in Newcastle's West End was revealed with the launch of Northumbria Police's Operation Sanctuary.

A specialist team of detectives was set up after a young woman with learning difficulties spoke to her social worker about sexual exploitation.

As multiple arrests were made, the true scale of the grooming problem began to be uncovered, with more and more victims coming forward or being traced by police.

And police and other agencies quickly realised sexual exploitation of children and vulnerable adults was going on in the city on a much larger scale than previously thought.

Eighteen people were eventually jailed in 2017, as a result of the Operation Shelter investigation, which smashed a network of predators from the city's West End.

The gang targeted some of Newcastle's most vulnerable females by plying them with drugs and booze before using them for sex.

> Winton Keenen

Northumbria Police's Chief Constable Winton Keenen said that while the problem had not gone away, he felt the public were now more willing to come forward and report their suspicions of exploitation.

He said: "We can't say it's stopped, but we have lifted stones that hadn't been lifted before. The community are much happier to share things with us now. I'm sure there will still be problems, but we are not getting the intelligence to suggest it is at the level it was."

The Shelter investigation was one of the most complex in Northumbria Police's history.

At the time officers said they had to go out and seek those who had potentially been harmed, many of whom did not even realise they were victims.

Hundreds of potential victims of exploitation were identified in the Northumbria force area, of which 108 were linked to Newcastle including those who gave evidence for the Shelter trials at Newcastle Crown Court.

Mr Keenen also revealed that he had met some of the witnesses personally to thank them for helping with the investigation.

He said: "I have been very privileged to have met some of the victims of that offending for me to thank them for their sheer courage when they gave evidence.

"They are quite remarkable where they are now."

Northumbria Police has now renamed its Operation Sanctuary team the 'complex abuse investigation unit' and detectives are continuing in their fight against organised sex exploitation.

Mr Keenen added: "We have maintained that team, we still have a complex abuse investigation team to deal as proactively as possible with this type of grooming."

Black Cats fans hurt by bottles thrown at game

> Sunderland fans at the Stadium of Light were targeted by visiting fans

KATHRYN RIDDELL
Reporter
kathryn.riddell@reachplc.com

SUNDERLAND fans were injured after being pelted with bottles and smoke bombs by trouble-making away fans at the Stadium of Light.

The anti-social behaviour by a minority of Coventry City fans on Saturday has been condemned by Northumbria Police after a number of arrests were made.

Officers say they dealt with "pockets of disorder" both during and after the match with reports of objects being thrown from the away end into the stands below. Five people were thrown out of the stadium during Coventry's dramatic 5-4 win.

A spokesperson from Sunderland AFC has confirmed a number of Black Cats fans were injured or had property damaged after being hit by objects, including bottles, thrown by away supporters.

Northumbria Police made eight arrests in total, resulting in one man being charged with breaching a football banning order, two men were charged with public order offences and three men were released under common law with two men facing no further action.

Two of those charged were Coventry fans and one was a Sunderland supporter.

SAFC owner Stewart Donald responded to concerns online saying he was 'distraught' at what had happened during the game.

He said: "I heard it and saw. I have requested a full report sent to me ASAP.

"I am distraught our fans appeared to be subjected to what I think I saw and if so is completely unacceptable.

"I should have gone over in person myself to help stop it. I will say more once I have investigated."

Daily Mirror associate editor Kevin Maguire, who is from South Shields, also witnessed the bad behaviour. He said: "I sat under this bombardment in the North Stand during second half and saw a woman hit by a bottle."

Northumbria Police is working with Sunderland and Coventry City as they investigate.

Match commander Chief Inspector Jamie Pitt said: "While the majority of fans who attended the match behaved incredibly well, the actions of a small minority have spoilt the day for many and this is totally unacceptable.

"Notwithstanding there was a notable steward and police presence at the ground for the match we are aware of the issue of objects being thrown from the away end. There is absolutely no place in football for this sort of behaviour and we are working closely with both clubs to help locate those responsible and we will take action on anyone found to be involved."

A spokesperson from Sunderland AFC said: "Sunderland AFC is disappointed by the disrespectful behaviour of many away fans at the home match against Coventry City.

> Sunderland fans demonstrated admirable restraint
> Sunderland AFC

"SAFC and Northumbria Police had been in contact with both Coventry and its fans group ahead of the game, acknowledging that there would likely be some sort of protest, and trying to ensure that the match could go ahead in a safe and respectful environment for both sets of fans.

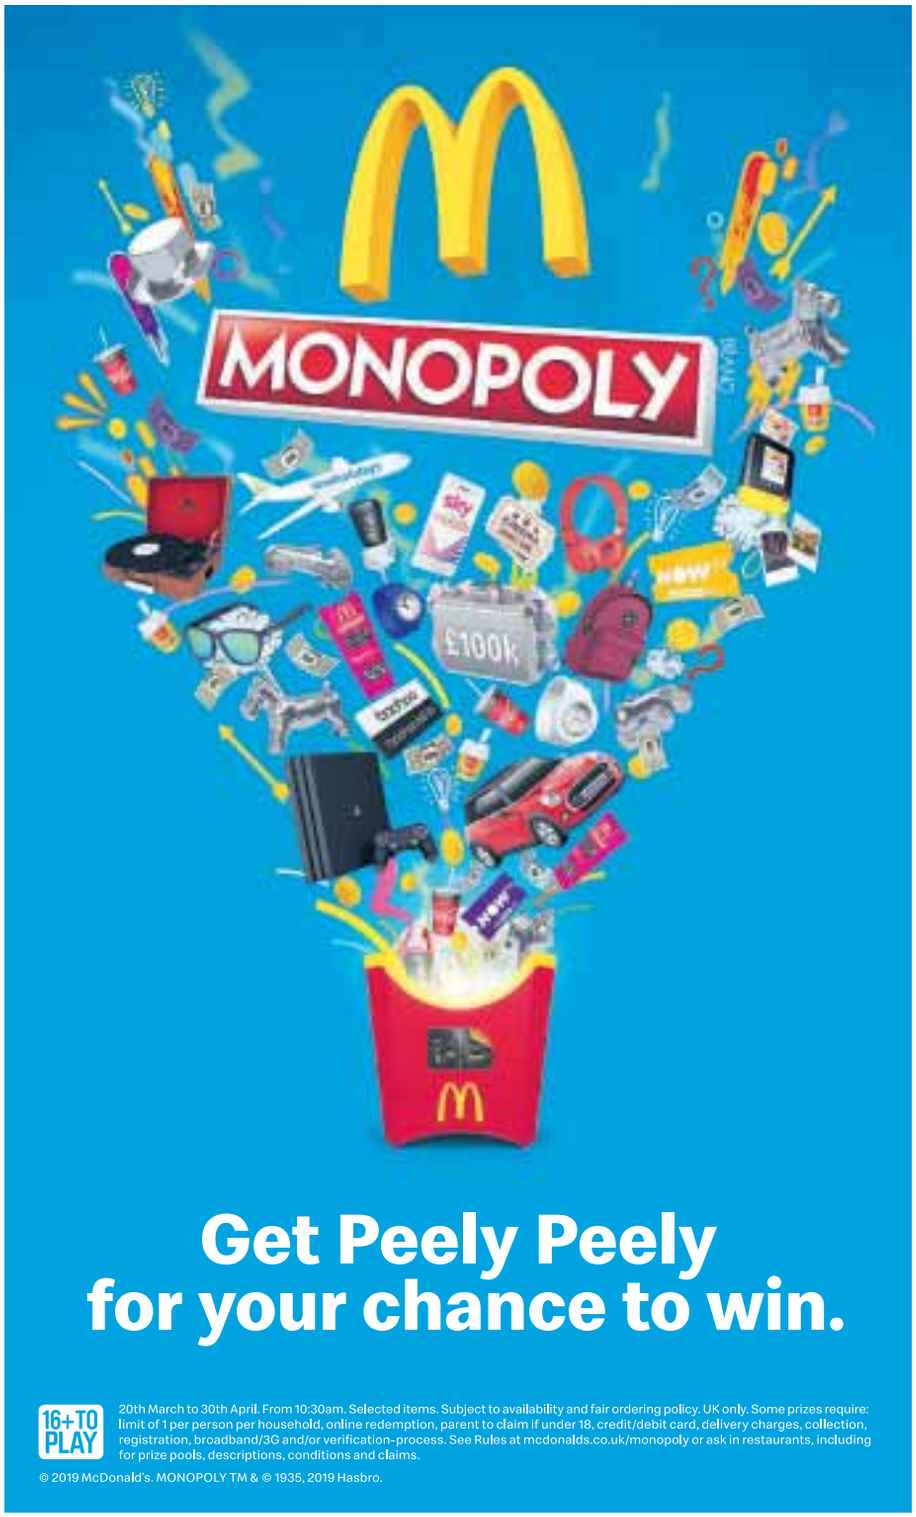
"That turned out not to be the case, with Sunderland fans in the lower tier of the North Stand being subjected to projectiles thrown from the upper tier, where away fans were housed.

"Several Sunderland fans were either injured by the projectiles or had property damaged by smoke bombs thrown from above.

"There were numerous other offences committed, all of which were especially disappointing given Sunderland AFC's willingness to speak to Coventry fans ahead of the game.

"In response, Sunderland fans demonstrated admirable restraint in the circumstances, for which the club is grateful."

Anyone with any information about the incident is asked to contact police on 101 quoting reference 382 13/04/19.



Concern over plans to remove motorway walkways

> How the redeveloped Premier Inn in New Bridge Street, Newcastle could look

IAN JOHNSON
Reporter
ian.johnson01@reachplc.com

OBJECTORS don't want Newcastle's "most luxurious hotel" to see the light of day - as it could make walking into the city more dangerous.

Developers want to build a multi-million pound 180-room hotel in New Bridge Street, creating around 200 jobs.

But the walkways over the Central Motorway would be removed – a move critics are up in arms over.

"This part of the city is already terrible for pedestrian (and) cycle access: a miserable concrete jungle of motorways," stated one official objection to the Gainford Group's plans.

"I'm no great fan of the current high level walkway, but stopping up the right of way altogether seems even worse."

Another - who certainly is a great fan of the walkways - told Newcastle City Council: "Call me a nerd, but these really are my favourite bits of architecture in the city.

"I wish that I could effectively describe to you how upsetting I find it that an area of public access is being taken from us.

"Accessing the city centre from the East can be difficult and dangerous, especially on foot, and this network of bridges and walkways provide efficient access to several different points in the city."

"Honestly, I'm so upset that this is even being considered."

The walkways, linking Manors and Northumbria University buildings to the city centre, were built in the 1970s.

But in plans, the Gainford Group claims they "present a range of problems", including anti-social behaviour.

They would be removed as part of its plans for the site, formerly occupied by both Premier Inn and Holiday Inn.

The firm, which already operates the Vermont Hotel, previously said the hotel would act as "a catalyst to future improvements in the area".

"We have big plans to create a rooftop bar and restaurant giving views over the city, a spa and to bring lots of other facilities in for guests," said a spokesperson.

> Gainford Group has snapped up the former Premier Inn hotel in a multimillion-pound deal

"Our aim is to make the connection between that area and the rest of the city. At the moment it almost acts as a barrier to the city so we want to open it up and make a grand entrance to the city centre – create a new gateway".

But the trio of locals are not the only ones with concerns.

Back in January, Metro operator Nexus said it was "concerned" that with tunnels under the site, due diligence hadn't been carried out.

Nexus claimed it hadn't been contacted over the plans, and sought "assurances" over the foundations and that no additional loads would be applied to the tunnels.

But it is what's happening above ground – not under it – which has riled some locals.

They fear the removal of the bridges will mean pedestrians will have to cross a "dangerous" road on a crossing. One objector adds: "I understand that the current route is a right of way. That should not be lost lightly and any change MUST improve facilities for pedestrians, not remove them.

"It should be straightforward for the developer to design their building to maintain or improve the current pedestrian access to the city centre."

A decision over the plans will be made in the future.

The Gainford Group did not respond to our request for comment over the objections.

Ministers urged to 'end misery of austerity' policy

> Philip Alston, left, the UN's special rapporteur on extreme poverty and human rights, during a visit to the West End food bank in Benwell

TOWN hall chiefs have agreed to write to the government demanding an end to austerity.

In a motion which labelled the policy a 'political choice', members of South Tyneside Council urged ministers to recognise the impact of years of government cuts.

And they called for the reversal of some of the measures they considered most harmful, including the benefits freeze, two-child limit and benefit cap.

The measure was proposed by Coun Anne Hetherington at the full council meeting on Thursday, April 11.

She said; "I'm pleased that as a socialist I get to speak out against social injustice and speak up for the right of citizens for a higher quality of life.

"But I'm also saddened that in one of the richest countries in the world we find an increased number of our citizens living in poverty."

According to a report prepared for councillors, up to a fifth of the UK's population, about 14m people, are thought to be living in poverty.

Of these, 1.5m are believed to be so poor they cannot afford 'basic essentials'.

This also referenced a report by the UN's special rapporteur on extreme poverty and human rights, Philip Alston.

Following a visit to Britain in November, he concluded austerity had 'fallen disproportionately upon the poor, women, racial and ethnic minorities, children, single parents and people with disabilities'.

He added changes to taxes and the benefits system had been 'highly regressive' and said this showed poverty in the UK was a 'political choice'.

In light of this, the council motion concluded by calling on the Prime Minister to change her policies to bring the government back in line with the terms of the Equality Act.

> We can send a message loud and clear that enough is enough
> Anne Hetherington

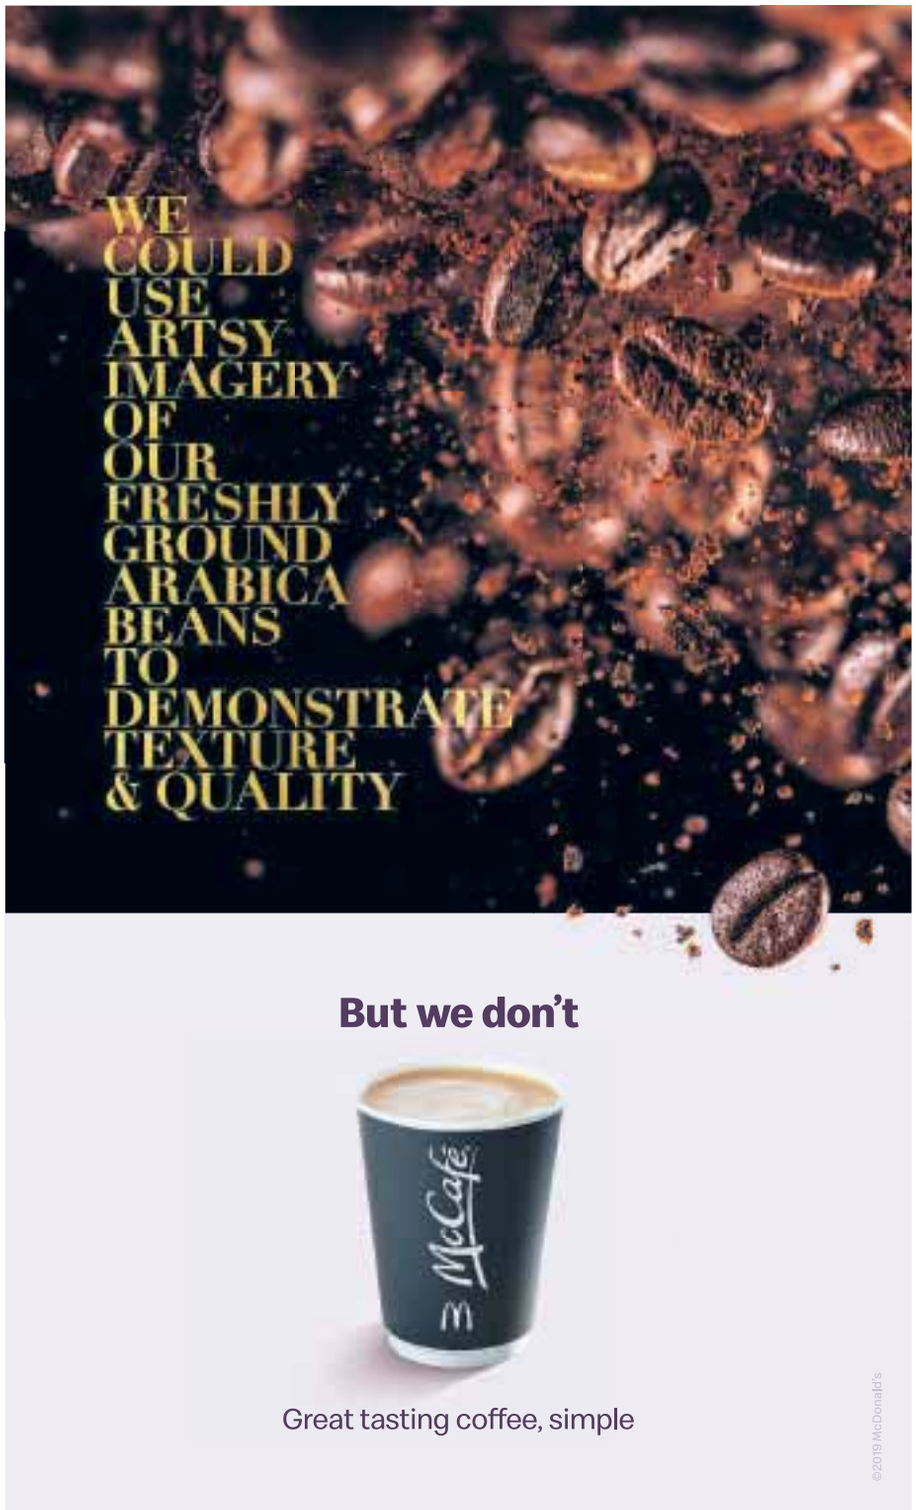
A study last year by researchers at Cambridge University claimed South Tyneside saw its spending levels slashed by 44 per cent between 2010-17, making it the worst hit by austerity of all the North East's council and the third worst nationally.

"Austerity is a political choice, it's a choice which has brought misery and has torn apart the very fabric of our society," Coun Hetherington added.

"We can send a message loud and clear to the Tory government that enough is enough.

"They can no longer bury their heads in the sand when the very fabric of our society is breaking down."



Closed after complaints

A Gateshead shop has been closed for three months following repeated complaints about anti-social behaviour and illegal cigarettes.

Istanbul Stores on Coatsworth Road has been the subject of numerous complaints from members of the public and nearby shopkeepers.

Gateshead Council officers issued a 24-hour closure notice on the shop on March 26 and changed the locks.

Now, a three-month closure order has been slapped on the premises at Newcastle Magistrates' Court.

Anneliese Hutchinson, service director for development, transport and public protection at the authority, said: "Istanbul Stores and its links with criminality has been a cause of concern to us for some time. We have received numerous complaints from the public and other shopkeepers about their sale of illegal tobacco, and the increase in anti-social behaviour around these premises has been noticeable.

"The sale of illegal tobacco is not a victim-free crime. The illegal tobacco trade is linked to organised crime."

Paris landmark Notre Dame goes up in flames

TONY DIVER
Reporter

A CATASTROPHIC fire has engulfed the world famous Notre Dame cathedral in Paris, toppling its spire and threatening the entire wooden frame of the building.

The deputy mayor of Paris, Emmanuel Gregoire, said the cathedral had suffered "colossal damages", and the emergency services were trying to salvage the art and other priceless pieces stored in the cathedral.

A cathedral spokesman said the entire wooden interior was burning and likely to be destroyed.

Officials said the fire may be linked to renovation work at one of the world's most famous tourist attractions, French media reported.

Paris prosecutors opened an investigation into the blaze as the fire was still burning out of control, and the authorities said no-one had been hurt.

Hundreds of people on bridges around Notre Dame in Paris, watching in shock as fire engulfs the famed cathedral.

Photos and videos on social media show the roof of the 850-year-old Gothic building covered in flames, issuing a plume of smoke above the city.

The Paris fire brigade can be seen in videos dousing the blaze with water.

A church spokesman said all of the cathedral's frame was burning after the spire collapsed.

The emergency services were trying to salvage the priceless artwork stored in the cathedral.

French President Emmanuel Macron postponed a televised speech to the nation because of the stunning blaze and was going to the cathedral himself.

He tweeted: "Our Lady of Paris in flames. Emotion of a whole nation. Thought for all Catholics and for all French. Like all our countrymen, I'm sad tonight to see this part of us burn."

Labour MP Yvette Cooper said: "Have just come away from the bank of the Seine after the spire fell as I can't bear to watch any more. Fearful for anyone close to the flames."

The Vatican has issued a statement that said: "The Holy See has seen with shock and sadness the news of the terrible fire that has devastated the Cathedral of Notre Dame, symbol of Christianity in France and in the world."

The statement said the Vatican is praying for firefighters "and those who are doing everything possible to confront this dramatic situation".

The Archbishop of Canterbury Justin Welby tweeted: "Tonight we pray for the firefighters tackling the tragic NotreDame fire - and for everyone in France and beyond who watches and weeps for this beautiful, sacred place where millions have met with Jesus Christ.

London hit by protests by activists

ENVIRONMENTAL protesters blocked some of London's busiest roads and vandalised Shell's headquarters as they demanded action on climate change.

Thousands of people gathered at five central London locations yesterday in a bid to bring the capital to a standstill.

Some activists glued themselves to windows and smashed glass revolving doors at Shell's HQ near Waterloo, while others climbed the building to spray graffiti and hang banners.

Police said three men and two women were arrested on suspicion of criminal damage and taken to a police station in central London in connection with the incidents at the Shell offices.

Campaign group Extinction Rebellion said it aimed to cause more than £6,000 damage so they can be tried by a jury in Crown Court.

Thousands of people joined protests to demand the Government declares a climate emergency. There were protests at Waterloo Bridge, Marble Arch, Piccadilly Circus, Parliament Square and Oxford Circus.

Police advised people travelling around London in the coming days to allow extra time for their journey.

Teachers in boycott vote

PRIMARY school teachers will be balloted on whether to boycott SATs and other tests next year.

The National Education Union (NEU) annual conference voted in favour of the action after a heated debate in Liverpool yesterday.

Members voted against an amendment from the executive which argued that a ballot was not the most appropriate tactic.

Sneak-thief's spending spree on stolen bank cards

A BRAZEN burglar treated himself to tea at Burger King and a rum and coke with the bank card he had just stolen.

Steven Spencer, 49, went on a mini-shopping spree just hours after raiding a home on St Luke's Road, Sunderland, last month.

The thief sneaked into the home while the occupants were inside and made away with a wallet and purse. He then used the stolen cards to spend over £100 on goods including clothes, beer and chocolate.

He also bought a meal deal at Burger King during his hour-long spending splurge, before the quick-fire transactions prompted a suspicious alert sent to the victim by the bank.

Last Thursday, Spencer admitted two counts of burglary and three charges of fraud by false representation at Newcastle Crown Court.

The court was told Spencer broke into a house on St Luke's Road on the afternoon of March 9 and snatched a wallet and purse.

Hours later, the victim received a text from his bank alerting him to a suspicious transaction that had been made at News & Booze, in the Bridges Shopping Centre.

After finding his wallet had been stolen, the victim checked his recent history to find further transactions totalling more than £100 had been made at JD Sport, Boots and Wilko.

Spencer had also spent £7.69 at Burger King shortly after treating himself to a rum and coke at a local pub.

Shortly after, the victim's partner realised her purse had also disappeared from the address – with fraudulent transactions also made from her account to the value of £29.10.

Officers seized CCTV footage that showed Spencer using the stolen card in a number of premises, the thief was arrested and later charged with burglary and fraud offences.

Spencer was also charged with a second burglary, which occurred on St Luke's Terrace on February 23, after his blood was found on a broken window.

Spencer, of no fixed abode, pleaded guilty to two counts of burglary and three counts of fraud by false representation.

He is due to be sentenced at a later date.

Desperate and sad: The deaths of homeless

JONATHAN WALKER
Political Editor

THE deaths of 120 homeless people in the North East have been described as "desperate and sad news" by a Government minister responsible for housing.

But a Labour MP suggested people dying on the region's streets were "not really a priority for this Government".

Emma Lewell-Buck, Labour MP for South Shields, said central government was failing to give local councils the resources they need to discover why people were dying.

Speaking in the House of Commons, she highlighted figures published by the Office for National Statistics which show that there were an estimated 120 deaths of homeless people across the North East between 2013 and 2017, including 32 in 2017.

An estimated 46 homeless people died in Newcastle in the period. The figures mainly include people sleeping rough at or around the time of death, but also include those using emergency accommodation such as homeless shelters and direct access hostels.

They included an estimated 20 deaths in Sunderland between 2013 and 2017, with a death rate of 1.9 per 100,000, as well as an estimated nine deaths in Durham between 2013 and 2017.

Officials at the Office for National Statistics say the method used provides a robust but conservative estimate, so the real figures could be higher still.

Ms Lewell-Buck told the House of Commons: "An estimated 120 homeless people in the North East have died since 2013 - a staggering increase of 71%. Those 120 lives mattered and they deserve some recognition.

"The Government have said that local authorities need to investigate fully the circumstances of such deaths, yet have failed to provide any funding to ensure that those investigations happen.

> South Shields MP Emma Lewell-Buck

"Is that because people dying on our streets are not really a priority for this Government?"

Housing Minister Heather Wheeler said: "The figures ... are desperate and sad news. We are working with the Department of Health and Social Care to ensure that when a homeless person dies, a safeguarding adult review takes place, where appropriate.

"The safeguarding adult review process was set up not to review every death of an adult considered to require safeguarding but as a process for learning lessons where the safeguarding adults board is of the view that local partners could have done more to prevent a death resulting from abuse or neglect."

The figures show that local areas in England with the highest deprivation had around nine times more deaths of homeless people relative to their population than the least disadvantaged areas. They also show that many more deaths of homeless people occurred in urban areas than rural areas.

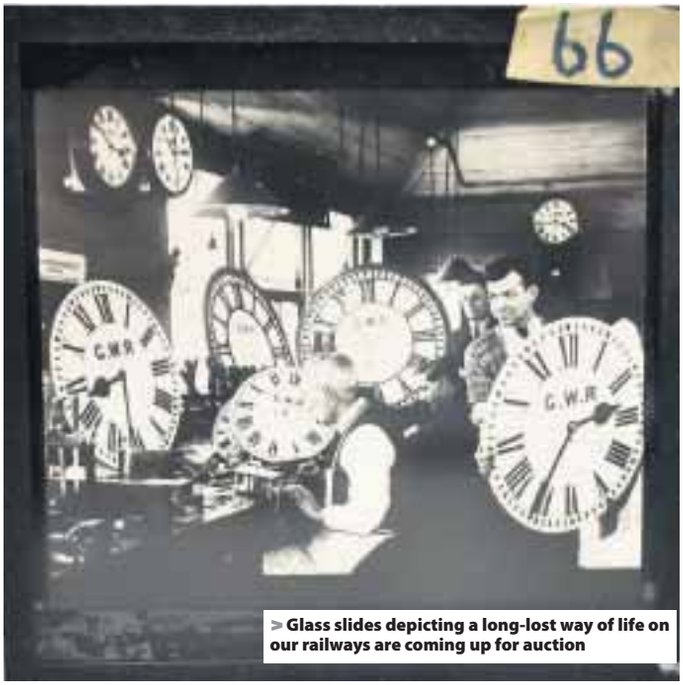
Life of railways depicted in glass lantern slides



> Glass slides depicting a long-lost way of life on our railways are coming up for auction

TONY HENDERSON
@Hendrover

FOR one set of workers, clocking on was exactly that. They are pictured making railway station clocks in one of 60 early 20th century glass lantern slides which provide a window into the now long-lost way of life of the railways.

The box of 60 slides was left in Humshaugh station in Northumberland when it closed in 1958. It is labelled Mr Wilson, Humshaugh, who was the station master.

The slides show many aspects of the railway industry, from track laying and locomotive building to steam and diesel engines.

Estimated at £200-£300, they are being sold by Chris Fewster at Anderson and Garland's Newcastle base today.

His grandfather, Jimmy Fewster, bought the station and converted it into a home, where he lived until 1995. The box was among the station's fixtures and fittings.

"I presume the slides were sent to station masters as a promotional move at a time when there was keen competition between railway companies," said Chris.

"They may have been used by the station masters to give public magic lantern slide shows, which would have been a big event in a rural village at that time."

Humshaugh was one of the stations on the 42-mile Border Counties line from Hexham, which followed the course of the North Tyne river, calling at Wark, Barrasford, Bellingham and Kielder before terminating at Riccarton Junction.

The station yard is now home to Bellingham heritage centre.

The first section of the line from Hexham to Chollerford was completed in 1858 and Riccarton was reached in 1862.

The showpiece on the line was the Kielder viaduct, decorated with battlements and false arrow slits to complement the 18th Century Kielder Castle.

In 1969, the viaduct was preserved for the public by the Northumberland and Newcastle Society, and is now a scheduled monument and forms part of a footpath.

It is a rare – and the finest surviving – example of the skew arch form of construction, where the arches are built at an angle. This requires each stone in the arches should be individually shaped. The line carried the seedlings from Aviemore to help create Kielder Forest.

> Beales in Hexham is set to close in the autumn

Beales shutting up shop as high street woes bite

GRAEME WHITFIELD
Business editor
graeme.whitfield@reachplc.com
@Graemewhitfield

A POPULAR department store in a Northumberland market town is to close.

Beales, on Hexham's Fore Street, is to shut its doors in the autumn, with the owners citing the challenging conditions on the UK high street that have seen dozens of retail chains either closing shops or going bust.

Beales is the main department store in Hexham, having taken over the site of the historic Robbs store in 2010 when its owners went into administration. The town's main post office is based inside the shop.

The store had previously been at risk in 2016, only to survive when Beales went into a CVA agreement that reduced its rent.

It is not currently known how many jobs are at risk with the closure.

The demise of the store comes at a difficult time for the retail industry in general, and department stores in particular.

The House of Fraser chain went into administration last year, being taken over by Newcastle United Mike Ashley's Sports Direct. Debenhams - in which Sports Direct was the largest single shareholder - went into administration last week and has been acquired by its lenders.

Beales, which is based in Bournemouth, has 21 stores around the country in locations including Kendal, Chipping Norton, Peterborough and Lowestoft.

It had previously had shops in the North East in Bishop Auckland and Redcar, but these had shut down in the last few years.

The company's chief executive Tony Brown said: "The lease on our Hexham store expires this autumn, we have been working alongside our landlord and their architects on possible long-term options for the site that would accommodate a smaller Beales store and these discussions are ongoing.

"Since Beales entered into a CVA agreement with the landlord in 2015 they have been very supportive. However, the current climate on the high street alongside increasing costs, especially business rates, which now exceed our rent means we have come to the difficult decision to close the store.

"We would like to thank our colleagues and customers in Hexham for all their support over the years."

> The climate on the high street means we've come to the difficult decision
> Tony Brown, of Beales

Recent research showed that four shops a week are closing in the North East, with the rate of closures accelerating.

The analysis, carried out by PwC and the Local Data Company, revealed 231 shops closed their doors in the region last year, while only 97 opened.

A number of factors - including the rise of online shopping, the increase in the National Minimum Wage and high levels of business rates - have been blamed for tough times on the country's high streets.

Fashion brands look to speed up store closures

MONSOON and Accessorize could be the latest stores to disappear from high streets up and down the country, after the owner of both brands called in advisers to speed up its closure process.

The parent company of the chains has brought in Deloitte to prepare plans for a possible Company Voluntary Arrangement (CVA), the same process through which retailers New Look and Mothercare closed stores last year.

Any proposals are also likely to include rent reductions on Monsoon and Accessorize's joint estate of almost 270 sites, which includes sites in Newcastle, the Metrocentre, Durham, Stockton and Morpeth.

A spokesman for Monsoon Accessorize said: "The UK retail trading environment is tough and we are continuing to look at options to reduce our overall costs as we restructure the business in the UK and internationally.

"We have made no secret of the fact that we have steadily reduced our store portfolio in recent years and shall continue to do so as leases expire.

"We are looking at options to accelerate these store closures." Earlier this year it emerged that Monsoon Accessorize was seeking rent cuts on some of its sites, but a spokesman denied that a CVA was on the cards at the time.

> Monsoon has sites in Newcastle, Durham and Morpeth

The CVA would form part of long-running efforts to slim down its store estate as sales move online.

It has closed almost 40 stores in the last two years, as well as relocating and downsizing others.

The most recent available accounts for Drillgreat, the holding company for Monsoon and Accessorize, show that the company made a loss before tax of £10.5m in the year to August 26 2017.

> TSB customers will be refunded for any loss as a result of third-party fraud

Bank announces plans to protect victims of scams

VICKY SHAW
Business reporter
business@ncjmedia.co.uk
@Jnlbusiness

TSB has announced a new "fraud refund guarantee" to ensure its 5.2m customers are protected if they are an innocent victim of a scam.

The bank has committed to covering customers against all types of transactional fraud losses, including cases where customers are tricked into authorising payments to fraudsters.

The guarantee applies to fraud losses incurred on or after Sunday, setting TSB apart from its banking rivals.

It will apply to existing and new personal and business customers, perhaps helping the bank win over consumers after it was heavily criticised for IT woes last year.

In general across the industry, consumers are entitled to a refund when a fraudster takes money from their account without their knowledge.

But when someone authorises a payment to a fraudster – often because they have been tricked into thinking they are transferring money to a legitimate organisation – the situation is much less clear cut and people have been losing large amounts of money.

Figures from trade association UK Finance show £354m was lost last year through scams in which victims were tricked into transferring money directly from their account to a fraudster – known as authorised push payment (APP) fraud.

Financial providers were able to return a total of £83m. Some £228m of losses came from personal accounts and £126m was from business accounts.

Banks have been working together to help increase the chances of people getting their money back, but consumer campaigners who have heard from people devastated at losing their life savings have urged banks to do more.

TSB, which came under fire in 2018 when customers were unable to access accounts due to a huge IT meltdown, said its latest announcement marks a significant step-change in banking, where customers are only refunded for fraud losses in limited circumstances.

It said TSB customers will be refunded for any loss suffered from their account as a result of third-party fraud. The bank will be communicating the terms of the guarantee to its customers.

Under the guarantee, customers will need to contact the bank to report fraud, and it will still investigate the fraud claim, including what happened and how, so it can inform the customer and ensure they are protected from future fraud.

It will not pay out to customers who try to abuse the guarantee – for example, by committing fraud on their own account or repeatedly ignoring safety advice.

And it will not refund losses on retrospective claims as the guarantee only applies to losses on or after April 14.

TSB said it may also adjust the conditions of the guarantee as time goes on to guard against abuse and help prevent and prosecute fraud and reflect requirements from regulators or enforcement authorities.

TSB executive chairman Richard Meddings said: "The vast majority of fraud claims across UK banking are from innocent victims of fraud who have been targeted by criminals and organised gangs.

"However, all too often these customers must fight to be refunded and are not treated as victims of crime.

"We want to provide peace of mind to our customers, that's why we're proud to announce the TSB fraud refund guarantee.

"If a TSB customer innocently suffers a fraud loss on their account after being targeted by a criminal, we'll cover it."

TSB said it is also tackling fraud in other ways, including preventing scams through increased education in local communities.

Chambers set to be pub hotel

THE first Wetherspoons hotel in the North East is set to open in Newcastle next to the pub chain's Mile Castle venue.

Pub operator JD Wetherspoon has owned and run The Mile Castle on Westgate Road for the past 10 years, turning it into its biggest and busiest city centre venue.

Earlier this year the chain won a bidding war with 30 other firms to snap up neighbouring building Gibb Chambers, the Grade II listed former home of DR C J Gibb, who appears in the Tyneside anthem The Blaydon Races.

Wetherspoons has big plans for the historic building's future, as an extension to the four-floor leisure venue next door, where drinkers can stay within stumbling distance of a night out in the Mile Castle.

At the moment Gibb Chambers has 6,887 sq ft of space over four storeys and a basement, plus 11 car parking spaces. Now the firm has revealed it plans to convert the historic building, built in the 1800s, into a 26-bedroom hotel, to join its 58 other hotels around the UK.

Around £2m is set to be invested into the plans, set to be submitted to city planners, which will also see the creation of a two-storey beer garden.

The nearest Wetherspoon hotel at present is in Whitby, at The Angel Hotel, where prices start at £69 per night. Others around the UK can be booked from £39 a night.

Wetherspoon spokesman Eddie Gershon said: "We have submitted a planning application to build a 26 bedroom hotel alongside the pub. This is in addition to the beer garden.

"The overall investment is £2m. We are confident the hotel and beer garden will be a great addition to the pub and the city itself.

"We will await the outcome of the planning application."

JD Wetherspoon opened its first hotel in 1998 in Shrewsbury and now has 54 around the UK, all of which adjoin its pubs and are decorated to have their own unique character.

The hotels range in size. All rooms have unlimited free Wi-Fi, en suite bathrooms, TV and tea and coffee-making facilities.

Businesses 'battening down the hatches' for tough times

GRAEME WHITFIELD

A RECORD number of Britain's finance chiefs are bracing for the worst and hoarding cash as they anticipate a damaging Brexit, a new report says.

A survey of chief financial officers by Deloitte – which has a major office in Newcastle – shows more than eight in 10 (81%) believe the long-term business environment will be worse as a result of Brexit, the highest figure since the referendum.

Nearly half of CFOs anticipate reducing capital expenditure and more than one in five aim to scale back deal-making activity, with all citing Brexit.

Around half expect to reduce hiring because of Britain's EU divorce, the highest level in more than two years.

Ian Stewart, chief economist at Deloitte, said: "Put mildly, it's been a turbulent few weeks and there's been little change in confidence and risk appetite among CFOs, as many priced in a tougher environment at the start of the year.

"They went into March braced for tough times and the latest round of Brexit uncertainties have not materially changed that picture. When expectations are already low, it's harder to be disappointed."

The Deloitte survey is the latest gauge of business sentiment since Theresa May had her Brexit deal rejected by MPs for the third time. Parliament remains in deadlock, and the UK in limbo.

Eighty-nine CFOs participated, including those at 48 FTSE 100 and FTSE 250 companies.

The report flagged three significant pressures – growing economic headwinds, cost pressures and credit conditions.

Finance bosses have become "markedly more negative" on revenue growth prospects over the last year. Half of them now expect a decline in revenues in the next 12 months, up from 18% in the first quarter of 2018.

Firms are placing greater emphasis on cash accumulation than at any time since 2010, with 52% stating that increasing cash flow will be a strong priority over the next 12 months.

This is in line with official data at the end of 2018 revealing that UK corporates held a record £747bn of cash, equivalent to 35% of GDP and almost a third higher than in early 2016.

Stephen Hall, office senior partner for Deloitte in the North East concludes: "Large businesses are clearly looking to protect themselves against risk by raising cash levels and bulletproofing balance sheets. They appear to be battening down hatches for tougher times ahead.

"While last week's announcement on a further deferral of the UK's departure from the EU removes an immediate unknown, the continuation of uncertainty is causing much frustration for UK businesses. As well as stashing cash, many continue to delay investment. Businesses remain in a period of further limbo."

Warm winter fails to dent Carr's sales and profits

@Scoopford

A WARM winter in the UK and overseas failed to dent the bottom line for engineering and agriculture specialist Carr's, which has toasted strong half-year figures.

The group is headquartered in Carlisle but has engineering operations in North Tyneside and the US, a retail footprint of 42 store shops across the North East and beyond, as well as joint-venture facilities across the UK, Germany and the US, with agriculture products supplied in the UK, Europe, Middle East, New Zealand and North America.

The firm has now announced results for the 26 weeks ended March 2, citing a good performance ahead of the same period last year, driven by improved profits in engineering and a solid performance in agriculture. Overall, adjusted revenue was up 3% from £200.1m to £206.2m, with adjusted operating profit up 5.2% to £11.9m and pretax profits increasing 4.5% to £11.4m.

The firm said its engineering division – which includes work by subsidiary Chirton Engineering, based in North Shields – was performing in line with expectations for the full year, with adjusted operating profit in the division up 45.1% at £2m, driven by improved performances in UK manufacturing and US engineering.

Directors hailed a robust performance in its agriculture division, despite challenging market conditions. Warm weather in the UK and US resulted in lower volumes across a number of its feed block plants, and directors also noted that continued uncertainty around Brexit led to caution among the farming community, impacting the UK agriculture division. Despite the challenges, operating profit of £10m was unchanged from the prior year.

Looking ahead, the group said the order books in its UK manufacturing and US engineering businesses are strong, driven by improved manufacturing processes and a strengthened management team, triggering a significant increase in performance.

It said that recent investments, new product development, geographic expansion and strengthened management teams leave the group well placed to deliver continued growth, and that it is looking at further acquisition opportunities.

Tim Davies, chief executive officer, said: "The group delivered a good performance during the first half of the financial year and trading remains in line with the board's expectations for the full year.

"During the period, our agriculture division was impacted by challenging external market conditions, including unseasonably mild weather in marked contrast to the same period in 2018, and continued uncertainty in the UK around Brexit.

"However, we were able to mitigate the effect of these challenges through improved efficiencies, operating cost controls and better procurement. I am pleased to report that our engineering division had a strong start to the year as a result of good performances in our UK manufacturing and USA Engineering businesses. We are now seeing strong order books across the division, driven by contract wins, and we have improved manufacturing processes and strengthened our management teams.

"Trading in the second half started in line with expectations, and the Board's outlook for the full year remains unchanged. We also remain confident in the medium-term prospects of the group as we continue to invest across our divisions, expand our product offering and grow our international footprint."

£170,000 secured to accelerate expansion

COREENA FORD

A NORTHUMBERLAND manufacturer is creating new jobs on the back of expansion into a new market.

Ashington-based Lynx Precast Limited is recruiting the new employees on the back of a programme designed to accelerate business growth and job creation in rural areas of Northumberland, County Durham and Gateshead.

The investment will see the company introduce manufacturing capacity for large reinforced concrete products including stairs, lift shafts and landing units to its factory in Ashington. This will put the business in a position to supply these products nationally, rather than buying them in from elsewhere in the UK and Ireland.

The expansion comes after Lynx Precast secured a £170,000 grant from the North East Rural Growth Network (NERGN) towards the overall investment of £630,000.

The grant will be spent on specialist machinery and on modifying the factory space to make way for large-scale manufacturing.

The company, which is based at Lynefield Park – the former Alcan Aluminium Smelter site – has been involved in the design, manufacture and installation of pre-stressed concrete flooring systems since 2014.

The project, which has already created five of the planned 10 jobs, will see production commence in June 2019. A further five jobs are planned before the end of the year.

Lynx Precast director Andy Teasdale said: "The market is huge; this investment means that we will be able to access large-scale infrastructure projects including highways and rail, not just regionally but nationally.

"It will open up a lot of opportunities in different market sectors and help us diversify and reduce our reliance on construction and housebuilding.

"Until now we have had to purchase reinforced products for our clients' projects and bring them in from outside the region.

"Without the additional grant funding this would have taken longer to get off the ground, it would have seen us adopt a much smaller scale approach over a longer time period.

"We are the biggest employer on this site with 52 staff at the time we made the application. With this funding boost we have been able to create the new jobs to employ the additional staff we need much faster."

Gary Roe, business growth and investment manager for Advance Northumberland, worked with the business to identify the rural funding opportunity and complete the successful application.

He said: "Investment in this vital capital plant and equipment will mean Lynx Precast has the financial opportunity to expand or diversify into new markets faster than planned, stimulating job creation with 10 new jobs for local people which is great news. The new facility will give the business control over delivery periods, increase margins and make it more competitive."

The North East Rural Growth Network has committed more than £5m in grant funding – 92% of its available funds – which will leverage more than £20m in public and private sector investment.

To date, more than half of the 321 planned new jobs arising from this investment have been created.

The programme is being delivered from March 2015 to March 2020 with £6m funding from the North East LEP.

Kier boss to lead review

KIER Group has announced that new boss Andrew Davies will lead a strategic review of the embattled construction firm.

The firm said the review will consider ways of "further simplifying Kier" to create a more focused group.

It will also examine the allocation of capital resources across the group and ways to improve cash generation and reduce debt.

Mr Davies was appointed chief executive of the FTSE 250 business in March and joined officially on Monday.

He replaces former boss Haydn Mursell, who left in the wake of Kier's £250m emergency rights issue, which was snubbed by nearly two-thirds of investors.

Mr Davies was due to take on the top job at failed outsourcer Carillion, but the group went bust before he could take up the role.

The conclusion of his Kier review will be announced in July. Kier – which is working on the new HS2 railway line – saw shares rise more than 3% to 359.7p after the announcement.

Deal or no deal, settlement scheme is now set in stone

ALISTAIR WESTWOOD

AS the process for the UK to leave the European Union continues on, the potential impact on staff and their families is high on the agenda for many businesses across the North East.

Whilst debate continues about the future immigration system – with the Government recently publishing initial proposals – I know many businesses are facing practical questions today from existing staff about their future in the UK.

The EU Settlement Scheme is now fully open. Regardless of if we have a 'deal' or 'no deal' Brexit, all EU nationals living in the UK will need to complete this process to stay long-term. But there's no rush. The deadline is June 30, 2021, or in no deal December 31, 2020.

It is free and straightforward to apply. There is an app allowing EU citizens to avoid having to send off their passports in the post. Happily, this will be available on Apple devices, not only Android, by the end of the year.

To date many businesses have been reluctant to communicate with staff about Brexit due to uncertainty. But the EU Settlement Scheme is set in stone – deal or no deal.

Businesses can play a positive role in reducing uncertainty by communicating these facts to their staff. Staff value information from a trusted source and light touch communications can go a long way in boosting employee relations.

I have been particularly impressed with the good work already being done by many businesses in the North East to communicate and support their staff.

Turning to the future immigration system, the Government white paper in its current form does not meet the country's needs and would act as a sucker punch for firms across the North East and the rest of the UK.

The paper outlines a new proposed new visa system which could prevent firms employing overseas workers earning under a set threshold – £30,000 has been proposed – for more than a year. This would directly impact businesses in the North East.

Across the region, 72% of workers earn less than £30,000 per year – indeed the average wage here is £21,636, below the UK average. In the accommodation and hospitality sector alone, one in 20 workers are nationals of European Economic Area (EEA) countries.

Continued access to overseas workers after Brexit is vital to drive growth, innovation and prosperity in the region.

The Government's current proposals risk causing significant harm at a time of uncertainty for business and will make the North East poorer.

Leaving the EU should be an opportunity to develop an independent immigration policy that works for business by being both open to allow our economy to grow and controlled to restore public confidence.

We are now in a 12-month engagement period and the Government must use this time to listen to our businesses and go back to the drawing board.

Exciting expansion plans for growing IT company

AN IT company with a base on Teesside has received a six-figure investment to continue its growth plans.

Razorblue, which has an office in Wynyard as well as sites in Catterick, Leeds, Manchester and London, has secured a six-figure investment from NPIF – FW Capital Debt Finance, managed by FW Capital and part of the Northern Powerhouse Investment Fund (NPIF).

The firm specialises in managed IT and security services, super-fast connectivity, cloud and hosting and business software solutions across a broad range of industries, working with major retailers, manufacturers, professional services businesses and hotels.

The company was started by CEO Dan Kitchen from his family home when he was just 17. After leaving college to work for himself, he started to grow the company, which moved to its headquarters in Catterick in 2009.

Today, the company employs 80 staff and boasts several multimillion-pound contracts. The investment comes as razorblue, which offers clients around-the-clock support, has expanded into the North West with the acquisition of J-Media IT Managed Services.

Mr Kitchen said: "This investment will support our growth plans following the acquisition of our new business in the North West. Our partnership with FW Capital will help us continue to move our strategy forward in the coming months, and we are very grateful to be working with a partner that understands our business."

Keith Barnes, investment executive at FW Capital, said: "razorblue has seen annual growth of 30-35% in recent years and this forecast is set to continue. We are delighted to invest in such a dynamic company during this exciting time of expansion and wish Dan and the team the best of luck."

The Northern Powerhouse Investment Fund is run by the British Business Bank and aims to cut the gap in funding options that currently exists between firms in the North and those in the South. It is supported using funding from the European Regional Development Fund.

There's more than just a mayoral contest next month

People in the North of Tyne area will be picking a mayor next month. But there are also elections in five metropolitan councils. We take a look at their current make-up and the candidates who will be vying for your votes

NEWCASTLE CITY COUNCIL

■ What kind of council is it?

Newcastle City Council is the local authority for the metropolitan borough of Newcastle upon Tyne and is based at Newcastle Civic Centre.

■ How many councillors are up for election?

One third of the council's seats are up for grabs on May 2 - one in each of the city's 26 wards. The only exception to that is in Monument ward, where two councillors will be elected following the recent resignation of Labour's Rosie Hogg.

Last year, the authority held 'all out' elections in which all 78 of the council's seats were contested following an overhaul of the city's electoral ward boundaries.

Of the three successful candidates in each ward last year, the one with the least votes would serve only a one-year term and be up for re-election this year.

■ What is the current make-up of the council?

Labour maintained a strong grip on the council at last year's elections, taking 56 seats compared to the Liberal Democrats 19 and the three independents in Chapel ward.

However, two recent resignations - Rosie Hogg in Monument and Judy Pearce in South Jesmond - mean that the ruling group currently has just 54 councillors, with two vacancies.

The Labour group is led by leader of the council, Nick Forbes, and the Liberal Democrats are led by Anita Lower.

Newcastle has been predominantly a Labour-held council and was red between 1974 and 2004. The Liberal Democrats were in control between 2004 and 2011 under the leadership of Peter Arnold, John Shipley and David Faulkner.

■ Who is the leader of the council?

Nick Forbes, who has been a councillor representing the Westgate ward - now Arthur's Hill - since he was 26, in 2000. He became leader in 2011 and is also leader of Labour's Local Government Association group.

Coun Forbes sought the nomination to become Labour's candidate in the North of Tyne mayoral race, but lost out to Momentum-backed Jamie Driscoll - one of his own city councillors. While that defeat has thrown Coun Forbes' future into question, he has pledged to put his name forward once again when the Labour group selects its leader in May. His council seat is not due up for re-election until 2021.

■ Which seats are being fought over?

All eyes will be on the battle for Ouseburn on election night, after Labour managed to oust Liberal Democrat Gareth Kane by a margin of just 12 votes this time last year. The former councillor is bidding to win back his seat this year from Labour's Stephen Powers, and the two have been embroiled in a row recently over the future of the Shieldfield GP Surgery.

North Jesmond is the only ward in the city where there is currently a Labour-Lib Dem split. The opposition party's Gerry Keating will face a battle to hang onto his seat amid another challenge from Labour's Alex Hay, who he defeated by 76 votes in 2018.

It might be worth keeping an eye on Labour's position in the West Fenham and Wingrove wards, too. While those areas are traditionally Labour strongholds, the ruling party took some severe criticism last summer over its plans to open a drug and alcohol recovery hub inside Fenham Library and might be fearful of a drop in support amid a packed field of candidates.

■ Where are the high-profile candidates standing?

There are a few of Labour's big hitters up for re-election - cabinet members Nick Kemp and Habib Rahman in the Labour strongholds of Byker and Elswick respectively.

Jeremy Beecham, the city's former council leader and a Labour peer in the House of Lords, is also looking to keep hold of the council seat he has held since 1967 in the Benwell and Scotswood ward.

■ What are the issues getting people talking?

Without doubt, the biggest talking point around the council right now is the prospect of a clean air toll being imposed on the city's roads.

Opposition parties will be looking to capitalise on the unpopularity of the idea of potentially charging drivers to cross the Tyne Bridge, while Labour's task will be to convince the electorate of their message that the Tory government has left them with no choice but to introduce a charge.

The shadow of Brexit will be looming large across the UK's local elections this year and both of Newcastle's main parties have stated their firm opposition to leaving the EU.

The swingeing budget cuts that Newcastle City Council continues to face are also an inescapable reality of this election - the cash-strapped authority says it has to slash another £60m from its books by 2022.

How those cuts will affect the future of services like social care, libraries, and recycling centres across the city will play a key role when voters go to the polls.

NORTH TYNESIDE COUNCIL

■ What kind of council is it?

North Tyneside Council is the local government authority for the metropolitan borough of North Tyneside.

Based at the Quadrant building at the Cobalt Business Park, North Tyneside, the council is currently controlled by Labour and led by elected Mayor, Labour councillor Norma Redfearn

■ How many councillors are up for election?

Twenty of North Tyneside's councillor posts are set to be contested when voters go to the polls on May 2.

North Tyneside has 60 councillors, three representing each of the 20 wards in the borough. At a local election one seat in every ward is contested. Each councillor must stand for re-election after four years' service.

Elections will be taking place in all 20 wards of North Tyneside.

■ What is the current make-up of the council?

The ruling Labour group has 52 seats, while there are six Conservatives, one Liberal Democrat and one Independent.

The Labour group is led by elected Mayor, councillor Norma Redfearn, while the opposition Conservative group is led by councillor Judith Wallace.

■ Who is the leader of the council?

North Tyneside Council is led by elected Mayor, Labour councillor Norma Redfearn. She previously represented Riverside ward from 2004 until her election as mayor.

■ What are the issues getting people talking?

In common with many authorities budget cuts have forced North Tyneside Council to make tough choices, and it voted to slash spending by £27m over the next four years. It also increased the council's part of the council tax by 2.99%, equating to an annual rise of £30.45 for a band A property and £45.68 for a band D.

The Conservative group made an issue of this when it objected and launched a failed bid to push through an alternative budget which would have seen a 1% rise in council tax and a freeze on the council tax rate for homes where taxpayers are over 65.

They also suggested restoring weekly bin collections, spending extra money on roads and pavement repairs, as well as investing in seafront regeneration and extra large bins and dog waste bins.

They suggested funding this by reducing the number of full-time trade union staff paid for by the authority, savings in management costs, treasury costs, reviewing the use of consultants and the subscriptions paid and sharing services.

SUNDERLAND

■ How many seats are up for grabs?

In total, 131 prospective councillors are set to contest 26 seats in 25 city council wards.

A notable absence from the race in the St Chad's ward, however, will be ex-Mayor of Sunderland and current councillor Stuart Porthouse, who has been suspended from the Labour Party, pending investigation, after sharing an interview featuring ex-Labour MP George Galloway on social media.

Coun Porthouse said: "It's one of those things, there's a long story to it which I'm not allowed to discuss.

"I expect some resolution [in the future] which I will be defending very rigorously, but I cannot comment on it, there's nothing I can add."

Coun Phil Tye, chairman of the Sunderland Labour group, said: "He [Coun Porthouse] is still suspended, pending investigation, by the national constitution committee of the Labour Party, so until such time as that's been concluded he is unable to be a candidate for the Labour Party."

Asked how long Coun Porthouse's investigation could take to resolve, Coun Tye added: "It certainly wasn't [going to be] in time to be able to get the papers in, so we had to go with an alternative candidate."

■ Are there any other areas to watch out for?

Also up for election is the former Washington South seat of disgraced ex-councillor Paul Middleton, who was expelled from the Labour Party after pleading guilty to attempting to sexually communicate with a child under the age of 16 last year.

And in the Sandhill ward, voters will be asked to vote for two councillors, following the decision of Coun Lynn Appleby to step down.

The former Coun Appleby was forced to sit 'without party badge' despite being elected as a Liberal Democrat last year, following a row over offensive social media posts.

GATESHEAD

■ What kind of council is it?

Gateshead Council is the local authority for the metropolitan borough of Gateshead and is based at Gateshead Civic Centre.

■ How many councillors are up for election?

Twenty-two of Gateshead's councillor posts are up for grabs when voters go to the polls on May 2. Gateshead has 66 councillors, three representing each of the 22 wards in the borough. At a local election one seat in every ward is contested. Each councillor must stand for re-election after four years' service.

Elections will be taking place in all 22 wards of Gateshead.

■ What is the current make-up of the council?

The ruling Labour group has 54 seats, while there are 12 Liberal Democrats.

The Labour group is led by leader of the council, Martin Gannon, and the Liberal Democrats are led by Jonathan Wallace.

■ Who is the leader of the council?

Martin Gannon, who was first elected as a councillor in 1984. In 2010 he was appointed as Deputy Leader and then Leader in May 2016. Coun Gannon represents the Deckham ward.

■ What are the issues getting people talking?

Budget cuts have dominated the agenda in Gateshead, with leader Martin Gannon saying it has become "impossible" to balance the civic centre's books, even as more than £13m was slashed from front-line services.

He also said that if the council scaled back its spending so heavily that it only funded adult social care and children's services, then it would still have a £20m shortfall by 2023. Full list of election candidates by ward:

A bridge too far

IT was the future once.

When Newcastle's aerial walkways were constructed in the 1970s they were an ambitious response to the need to separate pedestrians and cyclists from motorists.

That was seen as particularly important as the city embarked on construction of a vast network of motorways.

Except things didn't quite work out as planned, for which the people of Newcastle should be rather grateful.

What we now know as the Central Motorway was once the Central Motorway East. The Central Motorway West would have slashed a line from Barras Bridge roughly along the line of St James' Boulevard to the Redheugh Bridge. Another motorway would have run parallel to the Central Motorway East, crossing the Tyne on a new bridge about where the Millennium Bridge is now. An underground motorway would have linked all three. New Bridge Street, Jesmond Road and the A167 to Cowgate would all have been raised to motorway standard.

With all those roads, we'd have needed the walkways. But, in the event, Newcastle was saved from an orgy of bulldozing.

A stunted network of walkways remain. Most, to be honest, are not heavily used. Some stretches near Swan House roundabout and over Durant Road have been demolished and are not a great loss.

But the crossings over the motorway are vital. So it is to be hoped that plans for a new hotel off New Bridge Street do not lead to the loss of the bridge from there to Manors. It's not pretty – but it is needed.

Sudoku and WTO rules

PETER Curtis's letter (Leave would be irrelevant, April 12) wonderfully illustrates the contortions that the most fervent Leave cultists undertake to justify the WTO-based no-deal they want, now, which no one mentioned nor voted for in the referendum, as Mr Curtis admits.

Before we come onto Curtis' argument, you have to ignore all of the Leave side's false promises and lies, ignoring the £350m for the NHS, Turkey joining the EU and so on and so on; just look at the Leave claims about adopting the Norway model, the Swiss model, that we'd get the easiest deal in history – note the word 'deal' – that there was 'no suggestion' of leaving the Single Market, that we wouldn't move to leave without great care and consideration.

Just ignore these promises and lies blizzarded across the airwaves, in print, on Twitter, across social media in ads targeted through purloined data, and we come to Curtis's argument that, if you stare hard enough at the single leaflet from the pro-Remain government about leaving the CU, SM, and ECJ, right ... then, with a bit of logical deduction, one must infer we would be leaving under WTO rules.

So nearly three years after the referendum, his mandate for WTO no-deal rests on ... a Sudoku.

Except his case fails because, even then, the inference doesn't preclude a deal. It simply doesn't. And he doesn't mention no-deal in his letter – just like Leave in 2016!

WTO is one of any number of other possibilities inferred or imagined by the electorate. And it doesn't work anyway because several WTO members, including the US, have already said they're unhappy with our tariff schedules.

Unfortunately his entirely open-ended Sudoku has no solution.

Even more telling is when I asked him not to ignore the 16.1 million who voted Remain, in his reply he doesn't mention the three million Europeans nationals and million Brits in Europe who had no say in their own destinies which we voted to ruin by binning Freedom of Movement for ourselves and everyone else, instead he just scoffs at it all as 'pathetic.'

This man's idea of democracy is one based on criminality, lies, and contempt for all those who disagree.

A tax, but not on polluters

IN reply to T Liddle (Journal Letters, April 8); VED is NOT a tax on polluters, it is a tax on motorists that varies according to the (potential) amount of CO2 emitted by the vehicle; CO2 is NOT a pollutant.

I say 'potential' because a motorist who does 5k miles/annum emitting 260g/km would pay more than four times as much as one doing 10k miles/annum with emissions of 130g/km, even though their emissions are identical.

The system is flawed, it would be more sensible to tax fuel, oh wait, they already do – fuel duty and VAT. Does T Liddle believe that without the current system using CO2 emissions as the reason, that there would be no such tax on motorists?

As for sniffing exhaust fumes, no thanks, I wouldn't fancy drinking bleach or sulphuric acid or squirting super-glue in my eyes either, it's a nonsensical point.

And I note that T Liddle didn't repeat his/her previous false claim that air-pollution causes 28,000 annual deaths in the UK, and now states that air pollution "contributes" to deaths. Quite so, and nobody knows to what degree!

climate frauds to predict everything from the climate in 50 years time to temperature and sea rises has been proven to be so badly flawed that it failed to predict the global stalling of the temperature.

We know this because the climate scientists announced they couldn't understand why this had happened.

Years passed by and the embarrassment grew to such proportions they had to act.

Amazingly, the climate frauds used the Tory method for hiding the unemployment figures, they moved the goal posts.

No longer was the method for calculating the temperature rises, fine until it showed the temperature wasn't rising, the right method to gauge the temperature.

So they introduced another method of calculation, and low and behold the temperature was rising again and at an alarming rate.

Even one of those school children could have predicted that. The issue of deep sea temperatures is addressed by William Mason Gray in his peer reviewed and accepted paper, 'The physical flaws of the global warming theory and deep ocean circulation changes as the primary climate driver.'

Jack Fletcher and his colleagues in the teaching profession will clearly have heard of him as he is a pioneer of climate science, the man who envisioned, invented, and designed the hurricane and tropical storm early warning system, still used today.

What is scientific fact today becomes scientific chip wrappings tomorrow as science evolves. Only an idiot believes everything the government tells them.

Just for the record, the most abundant of those horrible green house gases the idiots want to be rid of is water vapour. I kid you not, you can check it out for yourselves.

People like Jack Fletcher want to be rid of clouds, which is part of the climate cycle.

If global warming was a fact they wouldn't call it a theory.

Chicken Licken is alive and well and getting grants from the UN but only to prove man-made global warming, they don't give grants to those who show the flaws.

Perhaps it is time teachers stopped brainwashing their pupils and give a more balanced view of the climate.

Bright spark

The super-bright trend isn't just for teenagers and Kardashians, says KATIE WRIGHT

A COMPLETE counterpoint to the swathes of beige that have swept over the fashion world lately, neon has emerged from its streetwear beginnings to become one of the year's biggest trends.

The Kardashian clan has embraced the highlighter pen trend with gusto, rocking retina-searing brights from head to toe.

Hazmat orange and tennis-ball yellow are popular with young fashionistas too – neon hues have taken over from millennial pink as the coolest colours to be seen in. But what if you're not a fan of clingy cut-out minidresses and skimpy crop tops? Fear not, there is a way to wear fluoro-brights without looking like a Kylie Jenner wannabe – and the high street is here to help.

Here are four ways to shop and style neon the grown-up way...

Hoot fluro orange two-part slim wedges, reduced to £46 from £72, Office

Coral neon faux snake courts £25.99, New Look

3 FLUORO FOOTWEAR

IF you've got a wardrobe full of LBDs and that's the way you like it, why not pop on a pair of neon shoes for a subtle step into the trend? The spring collections are full of eye-popping orange heels, so you can update your look with minimal effort.

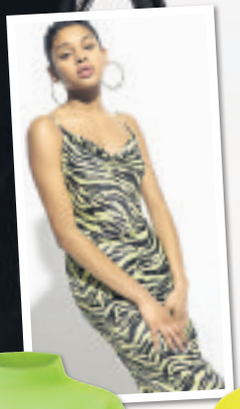
Lime pleated midi dress £75, Oasis (available in May)

Yellow neon asymmetric strap bodycon dress, reduced to £10 from £19.99, New Look

4 DAZZLING DRESSES

FOR maximum impact, you can't beat a sunny summer dress and there are some real stunners in the shops right now – from cool bodycon numbers to floaty frocks.

There's also lots of neon animal print around, which offers a slightly diluted way to wear the trend, and makes it easy to pair with black accessories.



Multi-colour zebra print camisole top £22; Neon zebra print midi skirt £38, Miss Selfridge

Joseph Ribkoff cover-up £129; top £99; trousers £129; bag £119, for stockists, see josephribkoff.com

1 THINK PINK

THERE'S no such thing as a subtle neon shade, obviously, but of them all, pink is the most approachable – not least because there's a bit of variety, from pale, washed-out pink to hottest fuchsia. One pop of pink – a lightweight sweater, for example – eases you into the trend gently. Try it with faded denim jeans, black tailored trousers or a neutral-toned slip skirt.

Washed neon sweatshirt £26, Topshop

2 SPORTY SEPARATES

GIVEN their streetwear origins, neon shades lend themselves well to sporty pieces. Think simple, long-sleeved tops or camis in lime-y brights, teamed with tapered trousers and trainers.

Neon yellow strappy cami top £10, JD Williams

Cropped neon lime sweatshirt, reduced to £20 from £25, Simply Be

Paradise sweat top £49, Hush

I don't want to spend a fortune on products I need every day

As she prepares to welcome her third child, TV personality Stacey Solomon talks to KATIE WRIGHT about her new skincare ambassador role

ON a drizzly day in April, the sky outside may be grey but Stacey Solomon is lighting up a London hotel suite with her expectant mother glow.

The mum-of-two is looking forward to welcoming baby number three later this year.

Right now, however, she's got other things on her mind.

"Sometimes I forget that it's even happening," she says, patting her belly. "Because life happens and I've got the two kids and I'm running around after them. It's only when I lay down at night and I'm like, 'Oh, yeah, you're in there, you're coming soon.'"

The Loose Women panellist will be having her first child with partner Joe Swash. The baby will join Zachary, 11, and Leighton, six, her sons from previous relationships.

In addition to her regular appearances on the ITV talk show, Stacey has just been unveiled as ambassador for skincare brand YourGoodSkin, a role she was thrilled to accept since she was already a big fan of the range – not least because it's so affordable.

"I've got sensitive skin and I wanted it for everyday use, twice a day, and I don't want to pay a million pounds for something I'm going to use every day," she says.

The 29-year-old credits the Nourishing Hot Cloth Cleanser and Pore Minimising Tonic for helping to transform her skin when she suffered a major acne outbreak. "I just went through a period of my life where my skin just wasn't happy and kept flaring up.

"I had really big breakouts, almost like boils rather than spots. I think now from my pregnancy hormones, I've got a lot more spots on my chin.

"Underneath this foundation, you would see I've got really quite big pores. So I do have to close them before dirt gets in."

Finding a simple but effective skin regime, as well as watching what she eats and drinks, helped Stacey get her skin under control. "I think cleaning my face really made a big difference, but what made the biggest difference was drinking loads of water and trying to be as conscious about what my gut would like as possible.

"I mean I still have those days where I'm like, 'I cannot face cleansing, toning and moisturising today,' but most of the time I'll take my make-up off because it's just not worth it for me now. As soon as my pores get clogged, that's it, I'm going to get spots."

On days when she does have the odd spot, Stacey uses the tricks of the trade she's learned from having her make-up done by professionals for years, ever since she shot to fame as a contestant on the The X Factor in 2009.

"Before, I didn't realise you have to have to put a primer on, so I would always just put my foundation straight on my face. Now I put my moisturiser on with SPF in it, then I'll put on a primer, so that the foundation doesn't all just go right into the skin."

One thing that hasn't changed, however, is that she still loves a bargain – like a £5.99 foundation.

"I usually use Bobbi Brown foundation, but then there's some others I will also use like Collection.

"It's some odd mix and match – I think Bobbi Brown is a bit expensive, so I would mix it with Collection, so you don't use it all up and you get a bit of both coverage. And I love all the microfibre mascaras you can get now so you don't have to wear false lashes all the time."

Plus, the Dagenham-born TV star doesn't require a glam squad every day. "I love doing my own make-up as well, there's something about drawing on your face, it's almost like meditation."

In fact, she's never afraid to go bare-faced. "I don't think too much about should I do a makeup-free selfie? Or should I wear make-up today? I just live my life," she says. "I think,' Yeah, that is what I look like' and there's nothing wrong with what I look like."

No wonder Stacey is so popular with her 1.4 million Instagram followers. While she admits she occasionally has to resort to deleting comments and blocking nasty users, on the whole fans are warm and friendly.

"I'm really lucky. I think people are just really, really lovely and accepting. And it's easy for me just to be whatever I am."

4 SMASHBOX GLOSS ANGELES LIP GLOSS, £15

THIS is amazing. It's shiny and glossy but doesn't feel tacky, heavy or sticky on my lips and it stays in place for hours. My new fave.

5 KIKO WATERFLOWER MAGIC VINYL EFFECT LIP LACQUER, £8.90 (kikocosmetics.com)

I WAS surprised by how punchy these colours look on. These six shades of pinks and corals have a high shine, but with the tint of a lipstick. Nice, but doesn't stay on long.

JOANNE WATKINSON

'TIS THE SEASON FOR A BOILER SUIT

I USED to love the feeling of going back to school after Easter in a gingham summer dress, free from wearing my itchy grey pinafore and a fiddly button-up shirt and tie.

Fast forward 30 years and the familiar relief of packing away my winter garb for a few sweet months comes back annually.

It's not temperature related, I don't do cold, nor is it because I have any wish to start stripping off and baring my limbs – mottled legs are never in fashion – it's a mind-set.

We have such long winters that unless I flick the mental switch in my head to "spring/summer mode" the season would never begin. So although winter has officially left the building, end of April early May, is a little early for us to be busting out floaty maxi dresses and flip flops.

Summer doesn't officially start until June, but spring fashion is the best, it's a little less restrictive than all those winter layers, but it doesn't require a full leg wax and a layer of false tan.

My personal fave, the jumpsuit (or boiler suit to give it its SS19 name), is back.

Arket and Urban Outfitters have taken inspiration from Stella McCartneys zip front version, while H&M and Weekday have more grown up button-front styles.

Wide-leg trousers are also on my transitional shopping list, along with any other trouser I can wear with flats. Check out COS, Mango and Topshop for the best styles. Add a utility shirt and a denim jacket and that's my spring wardrobe done and dusted.

What's on your wish list?

Cargo boiler suit £29.99, strappy leather sandals £17.99, H&M

Q&A

Q I AM finally getting married (I'm 50!) and I would love to wear a white/cream suit. I don't want to spend a lot but I do want it to look expensive!!

A CONGRATULATIONS! A suit is a very stylish option. I love this Emma Willis one from Next. It looks chic and it's a great price.

Pictured: Emma Willis ecru tuxedo jacket £68, Emma Willis ecru tuxedo wide leg trousers £45, both Next.

TRUST ME
BBC1, 9pm

New series. Corporal Jamie McCain is recovering from a spinal injury that has left him paralysed. He faces a new enemy when patients on his hospital ward start dying unexpectedly around him. Jamie believes the deaths are suspicious, but being unable to move, his investigation is dangerous and difficult. With everyone in the department hiding a secret, catching a culprit seems like an impossible task. But with Jamie's behaviour becoming increasingly erratic, is the threat real or imagined?

FIRST DATES
Channel 4, 10pm

Fred Sirieix and the First Dates team are back for a heart-warming 12th series, ready to cater to a new bunch of singles looking for love. First up is 32-year-old owl sanctuary volunteer Krystal, who fears that her chattiness and larger-than-life personality scare men away. But will she be the one looking for the exit when she discovers what her date James, 43, does for a living? Elsewhere, 20-year-old Georgia describes her perfect girl as a football-playing Cara Delevingne, so when she meets Georga, who bears a striking resemblance to the model and is an ex-Arsenal goalkeeper, it seems all her dreams have come true – until they discover that similar names aren't all they have in common. Meanwhile, car salesman Mark, who has been engaged seven times, risks being a little too honest with airline check-in clerk Jo.

THE GREAT BRITISH SCHOOL SWAP
Channel 4, 9pm

A predominantly white school and a mainly Asian school swap pupils in an experiment to see what happens when children from very different areas mix for the first time. A transgender pupil is paired with a devout Muslim girl, a white mother overcomes her prejudices to go for dinner in an Asian house for the first time, and tensions rise when the students find out what they really think about each other.

FILM

OBLIVION

> Tiger Woods celebrates after sinking his putt on the 18th green to win during the final round of the Masters

Every shot was a smart shot, says Nicklaus of Tiger

JACK Nicklaus has always believed a healthy Tiger Woods would equal or surpass his record of 18 major championships, even if he was joking when he said the prospect had him "shaking in his boots".

Yet while Nicklaus can enjoy the chase from the comfort of the sidelines, golf's current generation will rightly be concerned about having to deal with a rejuvenated Woods following his 15th Major victory in a memorable Masters at Augusta National.

The likes of Rory McIlroy, Dustin Johnson, Brooks Koepka and Jordan Spieth cannot say they were not warned either, Woods leading last year's Open Championship with eight holes to play and finishing runner-up to Koepka at the US PGA with a closing 64.

The 43-year-old then held off the challenge of McIlroy and world number one Justin Rose to win the Tour Championship in Atlanta last September, his 80th PGA Tour title and first since 2013.

Woods said: "The win at East Lake was a big confidence-booster for me because I had come close last year a couple of times and I didn't quite do it.

"I didn't do it at Tampa. I didn't do it at The Open Championship. I was a little better at the PGA but still I didn't win.

"East Lake was a big step for me, confirming I could still win out here and against the best players because it's the hottest 30 guys for the year.

"To be able to do that against Rory and Rosey there gave me a lot of confidence going into this year and I said, you know, just keep building on it and let's try to get the mind and body peaking towards Augusta.

"So my last three major championships have been pretty good, so that in itself gives me a lot of confidence going down the road."

Asked about the prospect of equalling or beating the record of Nicklaus, who amazingly also finished runner-up in 19 majors, Woods added: "I really haven't thought about that yet.

"I'm sure I'll probably think of it going down the road. Maybe, maybe not. Right now it's a little soon and I'm just enjoying 15."

Numbers 16 and 17 could arrive in the next two months with the US PGA Championship being staged at Bethpage, where Woods won the US Open in 2002, and this year's US Open at Pebble Beach, scene of his 15-shot triumph in the same event two years earlier.

"Two years ago I didn't know if I was going to play golf again," added Woods, who underwent spinal fusion surgery in April 2017.

"So to get back to this point where I have an opportunity to play and compete, have won twice and one being a major championship, it is a pretty surreal feeling to be honest."

Woods needed a nerve block just to be able to attend the Champions Dinner two years ago and told Nicklaus "I'm done" but Nicklaus never doubted a healthy Woods would win again and challenge his record.

"I don't ever pull against anybody," the 79-year-old said.

"Nobody wants their record to be broken but I certainly wouldn't want Tiger to be hurt and not be able to do it and now he's pretty healthy and playing well and I wish him well.

"I was sitting there watching saying 'he's playing so much better than anybody else, he deserves to win'.

"You watch how smart he played, how he used his head at 12 and put the ball in the middle of the green, how he hit the ball left of the pin on 13, hit the middle of the green on 14 and 15.

"Every shot I saw him play was a smart shot and when you have a guy who plays smart shots like that and plays them well he should be your winner. You just watched it all day long and thought 'this is a man who is possessed, he's absolutely under total control and he's going to get it done'. He did.

"I kept saying I think he will win another major. It all depended on Tiger's health.

"I don't think he needed to worry about his driver, he never hit the ball straight anyway. From somewhere he got it up around the green.

"Tiger is such a great putter, has such a great short game, such great distance control with his irons – the best I've ever seen – and if you get a guy who can do that he's going to win again. He topped it off this week by driving the ball well with it. It was a very, very special week for him."

> You just watched it all day long and thought 'this is a man who is possessed, he's absolutely under total control'

EAGLESCLIFFE FIGHT BACK TO CLAIM INTER-COUNTY FOURSOMES

THE Eaglescliffe and Durham pairing, the experienced Tom Smith and 17-year-old Will Skipp - the 2018 Junior Champion of Champions - beat the Northumberland team of 53-year-old senior statesman and former Scottish International Sandy Twynholm and Phil Graham, England Golf's Durham consultant, in the final of the Inter-County Foursomes at South Shields, writes CHRIS ROBINSON.

On a bright and breezy but very cold day, Eaglescliffe got off on the wrong foot, losing the first hole, but magnificently fought back – winning four successive holes to go three up.

Morpeth pulled a hole back at the eighth before Eaglescliffe lost the ninth after driving into gorse near a tree, took a drop and turned two up.

It now looked bleak for Morpeth and, at the 11th, after Twynholm had a penalty drop, Eaglescliffe let them off the hook by three-putting.

> Tom Smith, left, and Will Skipp, winners of Northumberland and Durham County Foursomes

There was a chink of light for the Northumberland pair at the 12th when Eaglescliffe drove out of bounds but, following halves at the next two holes, the Durham pair sunk an excellent putt at the 14th and went three up.

The writing was on the wall for Morpeth but Twynholm, trying to make a comeback, rifled a superb drive on to the 15th green and won the hole with a birdie - but Morpeth were two down with three to play.

Eaglescliffe hit two magnificent shots to eight feet from the flag at the par-four 16th and Morpeth, failing to reach the green, were unable to get down in two - so Eaglescliffe and Durham won the 2019 Northumberland and Durham Inter-County Foursomes title and gained revenge for last year's defeat at Westerhope.

Jonathan Ward, secretary of the Durham Union of Golf Clubs said: "It was a great final to get the season underway and Eaglescliffe were worthy champions."

Earlier, in the Durham final, it was almost a walkover for Smith and Skipp as they convincingly beat Bishop Auckland's James Glenn and Carl Johnson by five and four.

Lamb living high on Hog as he eyes up pro move

CHRIS ROBINSON

HEXHAM narrowly lost in the two Counties Foursomes finals but their 21-year-old star Matty Lamb, who guided them to the Northumberland final, had a tremendous victory in the prestigious 36-hole Hampshire Hog played over the North Hants Golf Club.

From a field of 72-star amateurs Lamb shot rounds of 70 followed by a superb six-under par 63 (133) to win by two shots from joint runners-up Simon Bairstow (Hallowes Golf Club 135 (70-65) and Ryan Brooks (Whittingham Golf Club 135 (68-67).

Lamb said: "My game feels sharp and I'm now looking forward to further events in the UK and Europe.

"There are a lot of tournaments to play in and I look forward to being considered for the Walker Cup (7-9 Sept, Royal Liverpool, Hoylake).

"I'm going to keep concentrating and continue to enjoy my golf and at the same time learning, with a view to turning pro."

Both Lamb and James Robson are coached by Andy Paisley, the head professional at Hexham Golf Club, and 38-year-old brother of European circuit star Chris Paisley.

The Hampshire Hog has been won by a host of top amateurs, including Justin Rose.

Under-fire ace supported by faith group

> Billy Vunipola's views on homosexuality have courted controversy

BILLY Vunipola has received support from the Evangelical Alliance in the wake of the storm created by his defence of a homophobic Instagram post by Israel Folau.

Vunipola has been summoned to talks with the Rugby Football Union to discuss a post on his own account which includes the line "man was made for woman to procreate, that was the goal no?".

England's number eight was acting in support of Australia full-back and fellow devout Christian Folau, who stated on social media that "hell awaits" for "homosexuals."

Peter Lynas, a spokesperson for the Evangelical Alliance - the oldest and largest evangelical unity movement in the UK - defended Vunipola's position and asked whether religious beliefs are also being accommodated by rugby's drive for diversity.

> Do rugby players have freedom of religion or is this another faith-free zone?
> Peter Lynas

He said: "Billy Vunipola has expressed the view of evangelical Christians on marriage and quoted the Bible in the process.

"He made clear in his post he was far from perfect himself and doesn't hate anyone. For this he is now being condemned and threatened with disciplinary action.

"Is he being disciplined for quoting scripture? For holding orthodox Christian beliefs or just for expressing them? Do rugby players have freedom of religion or is this another faith-free zone?

"As rugby celebrates diversity and inclusion, does this allow for orthodox Christian beliefs or is that the one view you must not have?"

The RFU is refusing to provide any details for its meeting with Vunipola, insisting it remains a private matter.

Twickenham has also been wary at this stage of saying whether disciplinary action will be taken - but if it is decided to pursue the matter further it would most likely be under the broad charge of 'bringing the game into disrepute'.

Saracens are conducting their own investigation after declaring Vunipola has failed to meet his responsibility as a representative of the club, while condemnation of his view has also come from Premiership Rugby and the Rugby Players' Association.

On Saturday the 26-year-old, whose mum is a Methodist minister, was booed during his appearance as a second-half replacement against Bristol, who also played gay anthem 'It's Raining Men' on their PA system.

Saracens' director of rugby Mark McCall said "I'm sure there's stuff going on in his head" but will pick him for Saturday's European semi-final against Munster at Allianz Park.

Folau has been told by Rugby Australia he is in breach of its code of conduct and will have his four-year contract terminated, subject to the 48-hour window for him to appeal.

Wallabies' head coach Michael Cheika has ended Folau's international career by revealing his comments on social media - his second such infringement - mean he cannot be selected. Folau, however, remans unrepentant over the post.

Smith, Warner back for World Cup

CRICKET

BATSMEN Steve Smith and David Warner have been named in Australia's World Cup squad, marking their return to the national team following bans over the ball-tampering scandal.

Former captain Smith and Warner were suspended for a year due to their roles in the plan to manipulate the ball using sandpaper during last March's third Test against South Africa.

Now the duo, who have played in this season's Indian Premier League, will return to the international stage in the tournament in England and Wales, which starts on May 30.

Chairman of selectors Trevor Hohns said: "We have been extremely pleased with how the ODI squad has been building over the past six months, including the recent series wins in India and against Pakistan in the UAE.

"Steve Smith and David Warner come back into the squad.

"Both are world-class players and it has been pleasing to see them produce some good form in the IPL."

Australia have also named spinners Adam Zampa and Nathan Lyon in the squad alongside Mitchell Starc, Pat Cummins, Jason Behrendorff, Jhye Richardson and Nathan Coulter-Nile.

Peter Handscomb, who scored his maiden one-day hundred in India last month, and Josh Hazlewood are among the big names to mis out.

Hohns added: "Mitchell Starc and Jhye Richardson have both been named subject to fitness.

"Given the depth of talent and competition for spots, there were a number of tough calls we had to make to settle on our squad of 15."

Australia's opening World Cup match will be against Afghanistan on June 1.

Hamilton: Let's not get ahead of ourselves

FORMULA ONE

LEWIS Hamilton says he is not getting carried away with his championship advantage after moving to Formula One's summit for the first time this season.

Following his victory in China on Sunday, Hamilton moved six points clear of Mercedes teammate Valtteri Bottas and is 31 ahead of Ferrari's Sebastian Vettel, his rival for the past two seasons.

After the opening three races in 2017 and last year, Hamilton was adrift of Vettel by seven and nine points respectively - only to claim the title on both occasions with two rounds remaining.

The 34-year-old is traditionally a slow-starter, so often coming alive in the second half of the year, but now has back-to-back wins after finishing runner-up to Bottas in the season-opening race in Australia.

Hamilton, who celebrated his latest triumph by making the 6,500-mile journey from Shanghai to Los Angeles on Sunday evening, is keeping his feet firmly on the ground as he pursues a sixth title.

He said: "It is far too early to look at the numbers.

"We are not going to get ahead of ourselves.

"We will keep our heads down and keep working as we have another tight battle on our hands.

"There are races ahead which could suit Ferrari more, so it is still up in the air.

"You have to operate to 100% and we are close to doing that.

"We have really delivered and we have to continue to do so.

"The key this year, as it was last season, is to continue delivering near-perfect weekends. That has to be the goal."

Mercedes became the first constructor since Nigel Mansell's Williams team in 1992 to start the season with three one-two finishes.

They currently boast the sport's dominant package, with Ferrari comfortably second-best in China.

The Italian team are also having to contend with an intra-team rivalry between four-time world champion Vettel and new teammate Charles Leclerc.

Although 21-year-old starlet Leclerc protested after he was ordered out of Vettel's way in Shanghai, team principal Mattia Binotto, who was only appointed in January, is adamant the battle for driver supremacy will not dominate Ferrari's agenda at their Maranello headquarters in Italy this week.

He said: "The first priority will not be to handle this situation. The priority will be to focus on the performance of the car.

"If we have the performance, this issue will be sorted. So performance is our first priority."

Solskjaer: Devils should take more from Paris victory than 1999 success

OLE Gunnar Solskjaer attempted to tone down the significance of the 1999 Champions League final - but the Manchester United manager feels the fixture proved anything is possible in football.

Solskjaer claimed a special place in the hearts of United supporters 20 years ago when his last-gasp strike against Bayern Munich at the Nou Camp sealed an unforgettable Treble.

Now the club's manager, the Norwegian returned to the ground on Monday as his side bid to overturn a 1-0 deficit in the return leg of their Champions League quarter-final in Barcelona.

Yet Solskjaer refused to dwell too much on the past and is fully focused on the task at hand, urging his side to believe they can prevail against the Spanish champions tonight.

He said: "Of course it's a fantastic memory for me.

"It's the only time I've been on the pitch but I don't really look back on that night too often.

"My job now is to make us play better than in the first game.

"I was a player back then. In football anything can happen at any time and we know that we can still be in this tie.

"It's about the quality, though. We need to defend well but going forward we need to score. If we keep a clean shee we can still be in the tie in the 93rd minute."

Of course Barcelona here at the Nou Camp is a difficult prospect but the memory from that night [in Paris] will live with the players

Ole Gunnar Solskjaer

Solskjaer thinks his players should be emboldened by their fightback against Paris St Germain in the last 16.

Following a 2-0 loss at Old Trafford, United responded in spectacular fashion with a 3-1 victory at the Parc des Princes to progress on away goals last month.

Solskjaer recognises the abilities of a Barcelona side who have won four European Cups since 2006 but remains in a bullish mood.

He added: "That memory from PSG will help the players, will help us as a team. We know we can turn things round.

"Of course Barcelona here at the Nou Camp is a difficult prospect but the memory from that night will live with the players.

> Solskjaer celebrates after his Red Devils beat Paris St Germain last month

"It's not that long ago and we're one goal better off."

Alexis Sanchez (left) was among United's 22-man travelling contingent and is in contention to make a return against his former club after six weeks on the sidelines because of a knee injury.

The Chilean, who scored 47 times in 141 appearances during three seasons with Barca between 2011 and 2014, has endured a largely miserable time at United as a haul of five goals in 41 games would suggest.

Solskjaer said: "For Alexis it's a big night and when he's on the pitch I'm sure he wants to prove a point.

"He wants to prove a point for us as well. He's been injured, he's not had a fantastic season so far and let's hope he can end the season great for us. We are in the business end of the season, we're playing games that Man United are used to playing.

"Let's hope Alexis can be happy with his performance when he is on the pitch."

Solskjaer reaffirmed his belief Paul Pogba will remain at United beyond the end of the season after the Spanish media questioned speculation linking the Frenchman with a summer move to Real Madrid.

Solskjaer added: "Paul's focus is on Man United and performing here.

"He has been fantastic since I've come here and I've no doubt he will perform for Man United as he has done lately.

"I don't think they (the fans) should worry too much."

Woods' feat could inspire Bluebirds

> Warnock is looking to Tiger Woods, right, for inspiration

NEIL Warnock believes Tiger Woods' stunning Masters triumph can act as inspiration for relegation-threatened Cardiff to mount their own comeback success story.

Warnock was watching on Sunday as Woods wrote one of the greatest sporting chapters by claiming a fifth green jacket at Augusta, 11 years after his previous major win.

Cardiff's hopes of avoiding Premier League relegation also appear fanciful with a five-point gap to safety and their remaining five fixtures including games against Liverpool and Manchester United.

Yet Cardiff would cut the gap to two points by winning at Brighton tomorrow night, although Chris Hughton's Seagulls do have a game in hand.

"We just have to look at the golf and at what Tiger has done - amazing," Warnock said of Woods' fifth Augusta triumph, which came after multiple back surgeries and personal problems had threatened to end the 43-year-old's career.

"Nobody gave him a chance either, he has been written off that many times and we have.

"Over the last few weeks we have felt sorry for ourselves a few times.

"We haven't time to do that (at Brighton) and if it's not good enough then we accept it.

"This is an opportunity to give ourselves a chance till the end of the season. We have to grab that."

Defeat would leave Cardiff eight points adrift of safety and seemingly doomed to an instant return to the Sky Bet Championship.

Cardiff host title-chasing Liverpool on Sunday and visit Fulham and host Crystal Palace before making a final-day trip to Old Trafford.

Asked if Brighton was the point of no return after Saturday's 2-0 defeat at Burnley, Warnock replied: "Yes I think you can say that.

REDS WERE MORE FOCUSED ON TIGER THAN CITY

LIVERPOOL'S players underlined their focus is on this season's Premier League title bid by watching the Masters golf rather than rivals Manchester City's victory over Crystal Palace.

Pep Guardiola's side briefly returned to the top of the table with a 3-1 win at Selhurst Park after kicking off two and a half hours before the Reds' 2-0 defeat of Chelsea at Anfield.

It is a scenario which will occur in the next two rounds of fixtures as City will again play before Liverpool.

Defender Andy Robertson said the players have become well-versed in blocking the outside noise. "We had the golf on. I wanted Tiger to win it," said the Scotland captain.

"I was watching it with James Milner in the treatment room. I'm sure some of the lads were aware of the City score but it wasn't something we spoke about.

"We didn't know the City result beforehand but, because we hadn't heard anything, we just guessed they had won.

"This is the first time a lot of us have found ourselves in a position like this and you have to enjoy experiences like this.

"I think we're all enjoying it. You saw that with our performance against Chelsea.

"Hopefully, we'll be celebrating come the end but we know there's a lot of hard work still to be done."

While much of the talk has been about City winning a quadruple this season, Liverpool are still chasing a Premier League-Champions League double.

They head to Porto tomorrow with a 2-0 advantage to take into their quarter-final second leg.

CLASH ON A KNIFE-EDGE, ADMITS AN ANXIOUS BARCA GOALKEEPER

BARCELONA goalkeeper Marc-Andre ter Stegen believes their one-goal advantage over Manchester United is "not enough to defend" ahead of the return leg of their Champions League quarter-final.

The Spanish champions walked away from Old Trafford with a 1-0 win following Luke Shaw's early own goal - but Ter Stegen is wary of a United side which has already upset the odds this season.

Ole Gunnar Solskjaer's side trailed 2-0 at the halfway stage of their last-16 fixture against Paris St Germain, only to stage a remarkable comeback at the Parc des Princes to reach the last-eight.

Ter Stegen said: "The good thing is we play differently to PSG but United are really dangerous.

"They are very quick. You always have to have be alert. I think it's they key to win this very difficult game.

"They know how to play in a very calm way. They made things really hard for us (in the first leg).

"The result we got in Manchester is dangerous because it's a very small advantage, it's not enough to defend.

"We need to step forward and create risky situations. We have to keep the ball and create good chances and score."

Ter Stegen's cautiousness could be, in part, due to Barca's shocking downfall against Roma at the same stage of the competition last season.

The Catalan giants seemed to be coasting after claiming a 4-1 victory at the Nou Camp but they were left shell-shocked as their Italian opponents rallied to win 3-0 at the Stadio Olimpico to progress on away goals.

Speaking about the stunning turn of events, Ter Stegen added: "It was hard of course but it's another year on, we got over it."

- Warnock

"I thought we had to beat Burnley and and Brighton if I am honest, so we are already one down.

"So it becomes even more important for both teams.

"I thought we were a little bit apprehensive with the occasion (at Burnley) and the occasion at Brighton is going to be even bigger."

Cardiff have been on the wrong end of several contentious refereeing decisions in recent games.

The Bluebirds saw three penalty appeals turned down at Burnley, including one where referee Mike Dean reversed his original decision to award a spot-kick.

A VIEW FROM THE GALLOWGATE

IN PG Wodehouse's "Stiff upper lip, Jeeves", Bertie is reflecting on his mood one morning and says "I marmaladed a slice of toast with something of a flourish and I don't suppose I have ever come much closer to saying "Tra-la-la" as I did the lathering, for I was feeling in mid-season form this morning".

The quote entirely mirrored my demeanour as I rose gingerly to greet last weekend.

The sun was out, two four-day work weeks beckoned, the only thing which could have improved the day was Holly Willoughby at my door with a huge lottery cheque. It is amazing what one result can do to your outlook.

For a few short hours I didn't concern myself with takeovers or Rafa B enitez's contract.

This is why we follow this sport – we may imagine it would be wonderful to be as dominant as, say Bayern Munich in the Bundesliga carrying all before them, but I bet every single Newcastle supporter would be experiencing a higher euphoria after beating Leicester away than any Bayern supporter after another routine victory in the Bundesliga at the weekend.

The result means we can actually enjoy our remaining games just as football games.

We may be only playing for prize money and seeing if we can beat last season's position but what a change from sitting in your seat like a father watching his daughter going out on a date with one of Motley Crue.

So there you have it Mr Charnley, this was a reminder of what could be if only you could impress on the Supreme Leader the need to properly back a manager who ticks every box supporters have been crying out for.

He isn't asking for an Al City war chest, just the ability to build a cohesive team which gives hope and not one which merely fulfils fixtures as contractual obliga-tions and as a means to sell tracksuits.

We have a situation with a quality, proven, popular manager champing at the bit for a bit of backing.

It's like sending the Rolling Stones out on tour with kazoos and ukeleles.

Is it too much to ask that, just occasionally, we arrive at a situation whereby we don't celebrate beating Leicester like a cup final victory but we're disappointed we didn't win by more?

We're still in with a chance, says Dubravka

MARTIN Dubravka has insisted Newcastle United aim to keep their foot on the gas in the last four matches of the season.

This time last year, the Magpies slumped to a series of late-season defeats and just scraped into 10th place on the final day of the campaign.

However, United still have a chance to finish in a respectable position this time around.

Reflecting on the scenes at the King Power Stadium – when fans stayed behind for almost half an hour after the final whistle – Dubravka said: "It was unbelievable to have that support from the away fans.

"We know when we lost against Crystal Palace we felt we didn't deserve to get beaten.

"However, the fans have stuck behind us and when you have two or three thousand people supporting you at an away game that is something special.

"I had goosebumps in the first half and when we were standing in front of them at full-time.

"You can see the connection between the players and the fans and we really appreciate it.

"I'm glad they have great reasons to celebrate and hope we can give them more. We want to finish as high as possible but take every game step by step, looking towards a mid-table finish.

> We want to finish as high as possible but take every game step by step
> Martin Dubravka

"We finished in tenth place last season so if it's still possible then we should try to go for it."

United are now preparing for Saturday night's encounter against Southampton as they look to move beyond the 40-point barrier.

Dubravka added: "It is an amazing feeling to get the win.

"The lads in front of me played a fantastic game and, although it was a tough match, they all put their bodies on the line, battling hard as well as scoring a very nice goal.

"We knew it would be a difficult game.

"Every time we play against Leicester, they try to control the game and you could see they were pressing really high and we didn't have much possession but all of the players, not just the back five, defended really well.

"Every ball which came into the box was being cleared and it was difficult to keep the ball due to Leicester's high pressing.

"However, when we had the ball we tried to be dangerous in attack and, overall, we scored one more goal than them, which is the most important thing.

"It is a special feeling to achieve my tenth clean sheet of the season.

"I know how long we have waited for it and now we have it as well as being in a much better position.

"We have another four games ahead of us and I think the pressure is not as high as before."

MATT Ritchie believes the current Newcastle United side is not always fully appreciated.

The Magpies all but secured their Premier League place for next season with a 1-0 win over Leicester City with seven of the squad which earned them promotion from the Championship three years ago still plying their trade in black and white.

United finished in the top 10 last season and are now looking for a strong finish this season with a chance to better last season's point tally of 41 in the remaining fixtures.

After helping guide the team to survival for another year, Ritchie said: "I'm not sure we get the credit we deserve.

"I think everyone involved at this club deserves credit.

"I understand the glory days of Keegan and Robson, I understand everyone keeps looking back.

"I'm not saying that we don't aspire to that, we do.

"We want to be the best players and the best group we can be.

"The manager will always say he wants to strengthen and the players are the same, we want to be competing for our places and we understand that's football.

"You want to finish as high as you can, individually and as a team.

"However, you can't take anything for granted in the Premier League.

"From the top six down, anyone can be 12th or tenth or eighth or 18th.

Hopes to seal Rafa deal soon

LEE RYDER

NEWCASTLE United hope to come to an agreement on Rafa Benitez's contract extension within the next two weeks.

However, the two parties are yet to agree on some of the proposals put forward by the former Liverpool boss during on-and-off discussions in the last month or so.

Benitez handed his players a day off yesterday but preparations for the Southampton match will get under way today – and Lee Charnley will look to re-open talks with the United boss this week.

Friday's win at Leicester City has eliminated one major concern for Benitez, who wants to manage in one of Europe's top leagues next season.

His desire to remain in the spotlight at the top level also effectively rules out a switch to the Middle East and China.

As it stands Newcastle are the only club talking to Benitez from the Premier League. Newcastle already have an offer on the table for him and they have reiterated their wish for him to extend his current deal - but Benitez wants certain conditions added to that contract.

These do not include a request for a bigger salary or even a huge transfer kitty.

Benitez simply wants to see a clearer process when it comes to recruitment and quicker decision making behind the scenes. He also feels ruling out possible signings purely on age grounds is unwise.

A smoother system on transfers though, coupled with a structured plan for academy and training ground improvements will secure Benitez's future beyond May.

Given there is a shorter summer transfer window coming up in the next few months, an overhauled transfer policy will be essential this year. The Spaniard has a long list of possible targets and some were discussed at a recent scouting summit.

Benitez said on Friday: "We have to have a team which can compete. This city, the club has potential. It's massive. I'm not looking to spend £200m but doing the right things.

"You can do everything right with your tactics but the other team has one player who can make the difference.

"You'd have to pay £30m to buy a Leicester player."

Benitez knows there is cash to spend at United after some lean windows since the club were promoted in 2017.

Whether that deal is agreed remains to be seen.

If Benitez doesn't end up signing on the dotted line he is at least safe in the knowledge there are other jobs waiting for him.

Newcastle, on the other hand, know they would be left with a disgruntled fan-base and the difficult – if not impossible – task of finding the manager who follows Benitez.

> Rafa Benitez still wants Newcastle to make more progress on his demands before he agrees to a new contract

following write-off, claims Ritchie chance, but now, all of a sudden, we look like a good side.

"The game plan was absolutely bang on and we couldn't have carried it out any better.

"Defensively, from the front, from Ronny (Rondon), Ayo and Miguel (Almiron, pictured right), we were brilliant.

"The way we defended in the last 20 minutes, against good players, stand-out players who are being touted for England, was fantastic."

This has been an up-and-down season for United and Ritchie is well aware of that.

It took the team until November to win their first game – a run which saw them fail to claim victory in any of their first 11 games this season – and they had a genuinely tough start to the campaign with games against Tottenham, Chelsea, Arsenal and Manchester City.

Ritchie added: "In the first ten games of the season everyone was writing us off.

"However, we knew we were so close to good performances and good results, we just needed a little bit of luck and a little bit of the rub of the green.

"If we got that we knew we could get three points rather than a point or not getting anything.

"Tottenham at home on the first day of the season seems like a lifetime ago now.

"The season brings you so many ups and downs, so to get to this point, on 38 points, is fantastic."

Young Mags thumped by ruthless Reds

NEWCASTLE UNDER-23S 0
MANCHESTER UTD U23S 5

NEWCASTLE United Under-23s saw their shot at the Premier League Two title slip go begging at St James' Park after a worrying late-season capitulation.

A first-minute opening was wasted by the Magpies and from there on Manchester United punished them for almost every defensive lapse.

The game was effectively over by half-time as the Old Trafford youngsters put on something of a football exhibition.

It was a far cry from the corresponding fixture earlier in the season, which saw Newcastle ran riot in a 4-1 win at Leigh Sports Village.

Back then Elias Sorensen was in a rich vein of form and scored twice prompting calls of a first-team call-up.

He trudged off long before the final whistle with a loan spell at Blackpool seemingly leaving him devoid of confidence.

This was a painful lesson for all concerned in black and white, though.

Newcastle had gone on the attack in the opening minute as Matty Longstaff slipped in Rosaire Longelo but former Toon goalkeeper Paul Woolston – released on a free transfer last summer – rushed out and blocked with his leg.

It would be a chance Newcastle would regret as Man United then scored with their first attack.

Nishan Burkart broke free down the right-hand side before calmly slotting home from the corner of the six-yard box to beat Nathan Harker and hand the visitors the perfect start.

On 13 minutes Longstaff won a free-kick down the right but the delivery didn't trouble the Red Devils and Owen Bailey's misdirected header bounced to safety.

The young Magpies had Jamie Sterry to thank on 17 minutes after Matthew Olosunde was allowed a free run down the right but the Geordie defender made a timely block.

Newcastle failed to gel in the opening stages and it was very much one-way traffic.

In the 27th minute, Man United made that possession count when Burkart was handed time and space on the edge of the box before firing in a low shot which beat Harker and doubled the lead.

Three minutes later the game could have been wrapped up for Man United as Angel Gomes attempted a shot from outside the box and clipped the bar.

The visitors did extend the lead nine minutes before the break as hot prospect Tahith Chong – who played in the Champions League against PSG recently – raced down the left to beat the defence before finishing with ease to make it 3-0.

Man United had more chances before the break but the deficit remained at just three at half-time.

Newcastle at least managed to start the second half with a bit of possession but Man United were in full control after their first-half dominance.

On 55 minutes Mo Sangare made a run into the box and was upended but referee Joseph Hull waved away the slight protests.

Dawson then made a change with Sangare replaced by Cal Roberts just before the hour.

Chong also went off for Man United as Josh Bohui. His exit did even things up a little bit and the hosts started to get back into the game a bit more.

Lewis Cass had a wild attempt at goal at the Gallowgate End as Newcastle fought to get back in the game.

Sorensen's disappointing night came to an end with 27 minutes left gone.

The Dane had been unable to add to his impressive goal haul on the night but he didn't get much service.

Tyrique Bartlett was thrown on to lead the line and try to add some respectability to the scoreline.

However, the game started to drift again and Mason Greenwood's shot on the turn forced Harker into a fine save low down.

As the game petered out, Roberts and Bailey were booked for fouls as some home players lost their cool.

With 13 minutes left Bailey's foul cost Newcastle dearly as Greenwood stepped up from 25 yards to curl home majestically into the top left-hand corner of Harker's net.

Greenwood then applied the finish after Dylan Levitt's cross with seven minutes left to make it 5-0.

Woolston returned to Tyneside to enjoy a shutout but in truth he was only tested once in the first minute, he could have flipped open a deck chair for the rest of the game.

Dawson's side still have one league game left away to Middlesbrough - but will need a big improvement if they are to succeed in the play-offs.

Ex-Magpies keeper Paul Woolston was only tested once in the first minute. He could have flipped open a deck chair for the rest of the game

Late strike by Connelly saves day for Wear starlets

SUNDERLAND U23S	1
FULHAM U23S	1

LEE Connelly's last-minute equaliser earned Sunderland a point against ten-man Fulham at Eppleton.

Connelly scored in the 89th minute to cancel out Jerome Opoku's first-half opener and spare the Black Cats defeat in their final home game of the Premier League Two season.

Sunderland should have made more of their man advantage, which they held for more than half the match after Fulham goal keeper Magnus Norman was shown a straight red card by referee Garreth Rhodes for using his hand outside the penalty area to stop a goalbound shot from Benji Kimpioka on the stroke of half-time.

Sunderland – who included fringe first-teamers Kimpioka and Bali Mumba in their starting XI against the third-bottom Cottagers – are already assured of finishing at the foot of the Group Twotable and side round off their campaign with a trip to Southampton in a fortnight's time.

There was little in the game in the early stages, with chances at both ends.

Connelly saw an attempted chip from the edge of the box clear the bar, while Jake Hackett sent a long-range free-kick straight at Norman and the keeper also saved another effort from distance, this time from Connolly.

At the other end, Jayden Harris sent two efforts wide of the target, and Nicolas Santos Clase was also unable to test Max Stryjek.

Fulham went in front in the 32nd minute from a set-piece, Opoku reaching Tyrese Francois' corner ahead of Stryjek to nod home from close range.

The goal put the Londoners in a commanding position but they found themselves a man light on the stroke of half-time when Norman was sent off for handling the ball outside his penalty area as he rushed out to block a shot from Kimpioka.

Kimpioka's free-kick hit the wall and Dan Neil's follow-up shot took a big deflection, substitute goalkeeper George Wickens reacting quickly to change direction and claw the ball away for a corner.

Sunderland were unable to make their numerical advantage count in the second half and if anything Fulham looked more likely to extend their lead.

However, the Wearsiders snatched a late leveller when a corner kick from the right came all the way to Connelly beyond the far post and his shot from a tight angle went across the goalkeeper and found the net.

SUNDERLAND: Stryjek, Evans (Kokolo 62), Taylor, Bainbridge, Hunter, Neil, Connolly (Gamble 62), Mumba, Hackett, Connelly, Kimpioka. Subs not used: Johnstone, Young, Storey BOOKED: Hackett
FULHAM: Norman, Fossey, McAvoy, Opoku, Sessegnon, Harris, Francois, De La Torre, Edun, Clase, Kait (Wickens 45+1). Subs not used: Asare, Abraham, Hilton, Garrido
SENT OFF: Norman. ATTENDANCE: 193.

THE AGENDA: Big-spending Wearsiders poised

Donald expects a busy summer for Cats regardless of promotion status

STUART RAYNER
Football writer
stuart.rayner@reachplc.com
@sturayner

"THIS summer requires us to be really clever, I think," said Stewart Donald.

If anyone was under the misapprehension sorting out Sunderland's wage bill was done last summer, the chairman's latest appearance on the Roker Rapport podcast was a sobering reminder there is still plenty to do.

Players like Jack Rodwell, Didier Ndong and Papy Djilobodji might have been struck off and replaced with others more in keeping with the club's new – and hopefully temporary – League One surroundings but the legacies of mismanagement remain.

Even once a few more are lopped off next month, Donald estimates promotion would instantly add £4m to the wage bill, more than doubling the payroll most leading clubs bring up to the Championship.

Stay in League One and Sunderland are committed to £14m of wages in 2019-20 and there are players not yet in that group they would like to keep.

Denver Hume, Elliot Embleton, Ethan Robson and Max Stryjek are home-grown assets worth retaining, while Benji Kimpioka has been offered a pay rise to stop him running down his deal.

Sunderland's commitment to Lee Cattermole, Aiden McGeady and Bryan Oviedo will continue regardless of their division. Cattermole and McGeady's contracts arguably offer decent value in the Championship but Oviedo has played infrequently in League One.

Last summer his wages stopped him departing and if he moves on at the end of the season part of his pay may continue to come from the Stadium of Light coffers.

It explains why Donald is exploring selling off the Stadium of Light's name to the highest – suitable – bidder.

Yet while extra money will be needed to compete in the graveyard of fallen giants that is the second tier, he insists it will not force Ross into a sell-to-buy situation.

Whatever decisions have to be made, they will have to be made quickly. Sunderland's fate remains in their own hands despite the 5-4 home defeat to Coventry City which knocked them out of the automatic promotion places almost as quickly as they went into them.

One thing is for certain – Sunderland will have one of the bigger budgets whichever league they play in.

"Jack is going to have quite a large part of his budget pre-spent," Donald told his regular vehicle for communicating with supporters. "We have about £14m-worth of contracted players (for next season).

"Because of the clauses in their contracts, if we are promoted that's £18m before we sign a player. That's above our break-even point.

"The challenge for us is going to be how do we give Jack more funds so that we can still wheel and deal in the market. (An) £18m playing budget in the Championship, you'd expect to do quite well with that when you're hearing QPR (17th in the Championship) are expected to take their budget next year down to £11m.

"Teams who have gone up before with a budget of £6m or £7m, the biggest teams, we're going up having £10m more than that already committed.

"I am expecting quite a busy summer again. A lot of that is going to be defined by the next (five) games because we have different challenges depending what league we're in."

Not that money decides any league table, despite what some might think.

As Donald points out: "The Championship is full of clubs who have not spent money well. On Sunderland's budget last season to get relegated – there were clubs whostayed up with half that money spent." He has bankrolled a big squad and topping it off with January's signing of Will Grigg for £3m potentially rising to £4m will eat into the budget.

Thirty-one players have been used in the league and not all have been a success.

Summer signings Glenn Loovens and Alim Ozturk have not been seen in League One since December's defeat at Portsmouth while Donald Love's last appearance was on September 1. Max Power and Dylan McGeouch were not signed as bit-part midfielders and Grigg is yet to get the goals to justify his fee.

If Sunderland go up they cannot expect to hold their own without reinforcements.

"If the judgement call from Jack, Tony (Coton, the head of recruitment) and Richard (Hill, head of football operations) is we want to sign, let's say ten players, the conversation will come back: 'We're not running with that many players so we'll have to do some wheeling and dealing,'" Donald stresses.

"I don't think we'll be in the position where if Jack says he wants this player we say 'you can't have him until this player is gone.'

"If I was some of those players I would be saying, 'If I'm a fourth-choice League One player in my position and we get promoted, how likely is it I'm going to go from fourth-choice to getting a game?

"I have one year left on my deal, I need longer security than that, we need to have a conversation.' Common sense just tells you that's bound to happen."

> Can Sunderland offer Jack Ross more funds?

for a hectic close season, claims club owner

> Steward Donald has a busy summer in store at Sunderland

History will tell you it cannot be banked on. Rodwell barely played last season but it took a pay-off to shift him. Even those some thought had gone have not. Take the on-loan Lamine Kone.

Donald said: "The club he's at (Strasbourg) have an option if they want to keep him for a fee, we believe that's likely.

"If that doesn't happen I think he'll find another club. I'd be amazed if you see Lamine back here in a Sunderland shirt."

Teams that have gone up before with a budget of £6m or £7m, the biggest teams, we're going up having £10m more than that already committed

Donald is preparing to sit down to another jigsaw, trying to find extra money from stadium sponsorship and a new kit deal.

He added: "We took the view (last summer) there were about 10 players to go or whatever the figure was but we accepted there would be a jigsaw and over time we would get that right. This summer could be a jigsaw again.

"We've had one summer transfer window and there was quite a lot to change. You can't do it all in one or two windows. It might take three or four to get exactly what Jack wants.

"If we lose two million pounds a year in the Championship, no issue, but lots of teams have scenarios where you might need to find an extra £10m-plus.

"Every focus at the moment is on trying to get the right result over the last five games. I would imagine the first ten days after the season would be pretty manic."

Sunderland 'stretched' at critical time in campaign

Chris Maguire is another who could come into Ross' thinking, although he has not played since breaking his leg in February.

Dylan McGeouch and Lynden Gooch are doubts, while Adam Matthews and Reece James are only due to resume training in the middle of the week and are therefore unlikely to be thrown straight in.

"Dylan, we don't know," said Ross when asked who could be in contention against Rovers.

"Reece and Adam I would hope might be able to train by the middle of the week but obviously the game is Friday.

"Chris trained Thursday and Friday a little bit, so potentially if he can get through a week's training he might come back into contention.

"Lee only joined training on Thursday, Aiden has not been training.

"Lynden will be touch and go. We're stretched, it's not a good time of the season to be stretched, but we are.

"I wouldn't know until the week unfolds as to who might be available."

Centre-backs Tom Flanagan and Jack Baldwin were heavily criticised for their performances against Coventry, and Ross may consider bringing in Alim Ozturk and on-loan Burnley man Jimmy Dunne in their place.

Another option would be a change of system, although Ross says the Coventry defeat owed more to bad on-field decisions than being outnumbered in midfield.

Ross said: "There's a lot for us to reflect upon from the last couple of weeks. These four or five days [before Doncaster's visit] are a chance for us to reflect on what's best for what lies ahead for us at the weekend."

Cash won't end fear of relegation, says Ritchie

LEE RYDER

MATT Ritchie has warned it is "naive" to think all of Newcastle United's problems boil down to a lack of on-field investment.

The hard-working Scotland international feels any team outside the Premier League's top six is capable of getting dragged into the scrap in the bottom half of the table.

United are currently just above the relegation zone in terms of position but have a healthy lead over Cardiff City.

The Bluebirds are 10 points behind United with five games left to play – and take on relegation rivals Brighton tonight.

Speaking about recent talk of Newcastle spending money, Ritchie said: "People talk about not wanting to be in this position again but that's naive when you're talking about the Premier League.

"It's a frustrating one.

"I understand and as players you want to achieve great things, but you have to be realistic. Other than the top six, every team can be in the relegation mix.

"Everton spent £100m last season but with 10 games to go they were still in trouble.

"From the top six down, anyone can be in a relegation battle, anyone.

"Whether they get a bad start or a bad run, you have to be realistic."

Newcastle could still feasibly net 11th or 12th place but they are now 80/1 to get a top-10 finish like season.

Ritchie added: "The top six or seven might have that bit more but the rest of the league is so close.

"This year, there's a little bit more of a gap but so many clubs can end up in trouble.

"We're seen as not spending money but spending money is no guarantee.

"We're competing. We only came up a couple of years ago and last season we retained our Premier League status.

"Hopefully, this season, if we continue to play like we did at Leicester, we can gain a few more points and finish close to where we did last season."

Black Cats need promotion bid back on track

JAMES HUNTER
Sunderland writer

JACK Ross' ability to ring the changes in the wake of Sunderland's weekend defeat against Coventry City will hinge on the fitness of key players working their way back from injury.

Sunderland have misfired in back-to-back home games, dropping two points against Burton Albion last week and then suffering a defensive collapse as the Sky Blues ended the Black Cats' unbeaten record at the Stadium of Light and became the first away team to score five goals on Wearside for more than 35 years.

The draw against Burton was enough to lift Sunderland into the top two but their weekend reverse saw Barnsley go back above them and Ross' men are now third, two points behind the Tykes with a game in hand but ahead of fourth-placed Portsmouth only on goal difference.

Sunderland's next game sees Doncaster Rovers visit the Stadium of Light on Good Friday and it will be difficult test against a side still looking to clinch a play-off spot.

Ross knows he must get Sunderland's automatic promotion bid back on course and following the Coventry defeat he indicated that he will need to rely on players who can handle the pressure of a promotion run-in.

Fit-again Lee Cattermole is likely to be ready to feature against Rovers after being included on the bench as an unused substitute at the weekend, while Aiden McGeady made his comeback as a sub against Coventry and could be in the frame.
